Truman Urges Labor To Vote Full Strength; Warns of 'Era of Fear'

'Outright Bribery,' Says President of GOP Plea for Gift Of Tax Savings

(Truman text, Page 2)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 6.—President Truman called on American labor today to cast an all-out vote in November or else get ready for an "era of fear" under the Republicans.

"This election makes a lot of difference to you," he told one gathering of workers. "Among other things, it might make the difference between whether you have a job two years from now."

The Chief Executive, opening a campaign for a full White House term which he promised would establish "a record," attracted crowds in Michigan totaling something in excess of 600,000.

In his final speech this evening at Flint, he charged the Republican high command with asking taxpayers to contribute to the GOP the money they were saved by the tax-reduction bill.

He read from "The Republican News," official organ of the opposition party, and quoted it as saying that "the least they (the taxpayers) can do is to contribute a substantial part of their tax savings to insure the reelection of the Congress that made it possible."

"Outright Bribery"

"I think that's one of the most outrageous things I've ever heard of," Mr. Truman exclaimed.

"It's plain outright bribery."

Mr. Truman delivered his principal Labor Day speech from the steps of Detroit's flag-garlanded city hall. The crowd that gathered in Cadillac Square to hear him was estimated by Police Chief Edwin Morgan at 175,000. Supporters of Henry Wallace were in the crowd, carrying placards.

He made six speeches in all in Michigan, the first in Grand Rapids and the last in Flint. Up until his arrival in Flint, where something like 120,000 turned out to see the President, the crowds were curious, friendly, but not very demonstrative.

The Flint crowd cheered him with gusto as he tore into the Republican Party and the "do-nothing" Eightieth Congress.

"All labor stands at the crossroads," he said. "You can elect a reactionary administration and Congress and go into an era of fear, or you can elect an administration and Congress which stands ready to play fair with every American life, and enter an era of hope."

In Flint, as elsewhere, he made

D. C.-Bound Plane Burns; Scientist Killed, 4 Are Safe

Lagrange, Ga., Sept. 6 (AP).—A Chicago scientist doing cosmic ray research leaped to his death from a burning B-29 Army bomber today. Soon afterwards the plane, the fire under control, landed safely at Maxwell Field, Ala.

The mangled body of Professor H. W. Baldwin, of the University of Chicago, was found in a wooded area by a small creek four hours after he and three others jumped from the bomber. His parachute had failed to open.

His three companions landed alive, although Sergt. John Mort of Altoona, Pa., had his ankle broken. The others are Charles Dooge of Chatham, N. J., a physical scientist with the Office of Naval Research, and Ramuld Anthony, of Inyokern, Calif., Naval Ordnance Training Station.

The bomber pilot, Maj. Richard Baker, of Inyokern, ordered his passengers to parachute from the plane.

The bomber was en route from Inyokern to Washington, D. C.

Civil Service Employes Kept Jobs When Dewey Won in N. Y.

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series. To find out what kind of a boss Thomas E. Dewey would be to 2,200,000 Federal workers, Jerry Kluttz interviewed New York State employes, their organization leaders, supervisors and civil service officials, at Albany. The second article will appear on Wednesday.

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 6.—What kind of a boss would Thomas E. Dewey be to the 2,200,000 Federal workers?

The answer should be in his record—his record as Governor of New York, and statements and promises he has made in his public speeches. As Governor, Dewey is in direct charge of more than 60,000 State employes and his actions affect more than 320,000 others in the Empire State's counties and cities. Next to the President, the New York Governor is the leader of the largest bloc of public workers in the Nation.

If he's elected President, Dewey would go to Washington under circumstances strikingly similar to those he found at Albany in January, 1943—a Government managed by long years of Democratic administrations.

So, what Dewey has done in Albany should be a good clue to what he would do as President. What is his record? Briefly, this is it:

He did not fire a single employe who was under the competitive Civil Service system for political reasons;

He did not launch into a housecleaning of Democrat-appointed

Army Asserts Supplies Must Move in West

Showdown Is Due Today in Walkout At Pacific Ports

San Francisco, Sept. 6 (AP).—Waterfront activity along the Pacific Coast was at a standstill today, but a showdown between striking longshoremen and the Army is due tomorrow. The Army said its supplies must move, strike or no strike.

An Army transportation officer said the longshoremen would be asked if they will load commercial ships with Army supplies.

"If they refuse, we will have to find some other way," he declared. "The supplies are vitally needed in the Far East and they must and will be kept moving."

The unions' joint action committee indicated Saturday that the Army would have to do its own loading if military cargoes are to move.

In a Progressive Party speech at Detroit yesterday Longshoremen's Leader Harry Bridges said the Army and Navy are "training men to take over ships on the West Coast." He called this another "Truman Administration - sanctioned move."

Bridges explained his appearance in Detroit by saying that "negotiations with management are at a standstill at the moment." He previously had declared the strike might last four to six months.

Shipping was tied up fram Puget Sound to San Diego. Some estimates placed the loss to West Coast waterborne commerce at four million dollars daily.

This was the fifth day of the strike, in which more than 28,000 men were made idle and approximately 16 ships were docked.

New Jersey Truckmen Join N. Y. Strikers

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—More lifelines supplying the metropolitan area's millions were severed today when 4300 New Jersey truckmen joined 10,000 others already on strike in New York City.

Full impact of the New York stoppage, however, will not be felt until tomorrow, after the Labor Day holiday.

Spread of the 6-day-old strike of AFL teamsters precipitated new fears that many supply channels,

Loyalty Probe Called Peril To Security

Scientists Warn Of Threat to Atom Research Program

New York, Sept. 6 (NYHT).—A group of eight physical scientists charged today in telegrams to President Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey that "irresponsible smears" by the House Un-American Activities Committee were "an imminent threat to our national security and entire governmental atomic research program."

The group's action was disclosed at a press conference by members, Dr. Harrison Brown, of the University of Chicago; Dr. Philip M. Morse, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. George B. Pegram, dean of the graduate faculties of Columbia University.

The telegrams said that the "smears" by the committee had made employment on atomic energy research "so undesirable that the combined full-time personnel of highly capable scientists and engineers in the various Government laboratories is on the verge of reaching a dangerously low level."

The scientists pointed out that there has been a continuous drib-

'Spirit Calls,' Girl Wades to Death in River

Barry's Bay, Ont., Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Henry Goglin, a farmer, today told how his 18-year-old daughter, Violet, had waded to her death in the Madawaska River because she was "called by the Holy Spirit."

Goglin and his 11 sons and daughters said they were "happy" that Violet "had received the blessing of the Lord and had been called to Him" when she waded into water over her head and drowned.

According to the father's story, Violet received "the blessing" on August 26 and began "praising the Lord," which she continued for three days. On Sunday, August 29, she arose before dawn and went to the river. Violet, who could not swim, continued to "praise the Lord" as she walked slowly into the water until she slipped from sight.

Obeying U. S. Court Order

Two Virginia Counties Rush Negro School Improvements

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

"Full efforts" to equalize Negro school facilities in two Virginia counties—as directed by a Federal court order—were reported under way yesterday.

In King George County, where the Negro high school opens Wednesday, and the white high school opens the following day, T. Benton Gayle, division superintendent of schools in King George and Stafford counties, declared:

"We're doing everything humanly possible to comply with the court order. Even though today is supposed to be a holiday, I've just been down at the King George Training School for Negroes—the only school involved in King George County—working with a crew of men to do what we can."

In Gloucester County, Superintendent of Schools J. Walter Kenney said "everything possible has been done" to provide "equal" facilities at the school involved there, the Gloucester County Training School for Negroes. Both white and Negro schools in Gloucester County will open on Thursday.

The order to King George and Gloucester Counties to provide equal facilities for Negroes was issued July 31 by Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson, after an unprecedented decision last spring. Surry County drew a similar equalization order, but through a consent decree was given until September 15 to report its corrective action.

In a fourth case, Chesterfield County was directed to equalize

Labor Day Vacationers Flock Home

Trains, Airlines, Buses, Highways Are Heavily Taxed; 160 Held as Drunk

The people who left Washington in droves last Friday to enjoy one last summer holiday came back the same way yesterday.

Washington's weekend visitors, on the other hand, started checking out of their hotel rooms and heading for home by midafternoon, as everyone prepared to settle down to humdrum daily life again.

This exchange kept transportation services on their toes. The airlines reported heavy inbound and outbound business, while railroads using Union Station added sections to bring back local residents in time for work this morning. Bus facilities were equally taxed. Trailways chartered extra buses to care for the inbound load.

Over the Nation, at least 339 persons died violently over the Labor Day holiday, the Associated Press reported.

Washington, which kept a placid, peaceful air throughout the three-day holiday, blessed its stay-at-homes with balmy weather yesterday. Highest temperature was 84, at 1:13 p. m. Today is expected to see little change in temperature, with scattered showers a possibility for the afternoon.

With stores and banks closed for the holiday, few persons ventured downtown. Those who did found some restaurants and drug stores open, on a holiday schedule. Downtown hotels reported they were from 80 to 100 per cent booked during the weekend.

Labor Day took its usual heavy toll of unhappy drunks—160 of them in Municipal Court yesterday.

The arrests, made on street corners, in parks, restaurants, train and bus terminals over the weekend, prompted one court official to remark, "I wonder if there is any whisky left in Washington."

The high cost of living left its mark even on Washingtonians planning Labor Day jaunts. The American Automobile Association reported that this year most of its travel inquiries came from persons who wished to go to nearby beaches or scenic points.

While the get-away-from-it-all urge apparently was as strong this year as last, Capitalites this year favored such nearby points as Skyline Drive, Ocean City, Rehoboth Beach, Del., and Wildwood and Cape May, N. J., for their "last fling," rather than more distant points.

Nearby Maryland beaches reported average holiday crowds. At Colonial Beach, Va., county police estimated between 10,000 and 15,000 persons sunned themselves during the day.

Glen Echo Amusement Park, which closed its gates for the season last night, reported a "very good" Labor Day crowd. The park will reopen next April.

Fisherman's Line Nearly Drowns Him

A George Washington University medical student narrowly missed drowning yesterday when his legs became entangled in his fishing line and he fell into the Potomac just above Great Falls.

Montgomery County police said Robert Sellers, 26, of Ednor, Md., was casting from rocks when the line wound around his legs and tripped him. In his fall, they said, he struck his head on a rock and became unconscious.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad workers said the quick work of two Marines in pulling Sellers out of the river saved his life.

Airline Pilot Takes Trophy And $16,000

Johnson Surprises Himself and 80,000 Others at Cleveland

Cleveland, Sept. 6 (AP).—Anson L. ("Johnny") Johnson, airline pilot, surprised himself and 80,000 others at the National Air Races today by winning the Thompson trophy and $16,000 first prize.

It was a dull but delightfully safe climax to the three-day program of speed, stunts and show of military might. The military put on the best show ever offered at a sporting event, including an unofficial world speed mark of 669 miles an hour.

Seven of the 10 starters in the Thompson—the classic of closed course racing with unlimited power permitted—quit before the finish. All landed safely at the airport in sight of the crowd.

Flies New York-Miami Run

Johnson, 28, flies a Miami-New York run for National Air Lines and during the war flew transoceanic cargo planes and ferried fighters to the combat zones.

Johnson's surprise was two-fold: First, he never before had finished a race, and second, he didn't know he had won until he was on the ground.

He just poured on the coal in his own way, believing that faster planes were well out in front of him.

But he didn't know that Charles E. "Chuck" Brown, a 25-year-old Indianapolis test pilot, had pulled out in the nineteenth round of the 20-lap event with a dead engine. Brown had led all entries except Johnson by more than a lap. For more than half the race, Brown

Juliana Takes Oath as Queen, Outlines Social Justice Plan

(From Press Dispatches)

Amsterday, Sept. 6.—Queen Juliana of the Netherlands took her oath as ruler of 80 million subjects today in a colorful ceremony which she turned into a demonstration of love and affection for her abdicated mother. She becomes the tenth monarch in the Orange-Nassau succession which began in 1598.

Wilhelmina, 68, who took the title of Princess when she stepped aside after a 50-year reign, had hoped to be an obscure figure at the inauguration ceremony which attracted European royalty and distinguished guests from throughout the world. But Juliana, before she took her oath turned and addressed her mother as the 3000 persons in Amsterdam's Nieuw Kirk (New Church) looked on.

"That I am now going to swear the oath on the constitution fills me with melancholy, for it is in consequence of the fact that my beloved mother has spent her powers in service of our country in such a measure as to compel her at long last to lay down her burden," Juliana said in a voice trembling with emotion.

"With your clear vision and your oneness in the depth of your heart with your fellow men, you toiled . . . for the good of one community. I, myself, and all others had the feeling you were there like a rock. When the storm came, we felt this more strongly, for the rock stood unshakable—'saevis tranquillis in undus'—calm in the midst of tempestuous waves."

Juliana outlined to the Parliament a program of social justice, cultural development at home, and "arranging on a footing of liberty and equality the relations to the peoples of Indonesia, Surinam and the Dutch Antilles."

Juliana then took her oath, and said:

"Courage to respond to this call I derive from faith in God and the great love which our people extend to me . . . The symbol by which I characterize my mother's reign and which to me illustrates the essence of Netherlands kingship will be in my mind; a rock in the turbulent waves."

Her first act as Queen was to award her mother Holland's highest decoration, the Knight's Cross, first class, of the Military Order of William, "as a symbol of the peak of your reign, your leadership in the troublesome times of war and oppression."

Juliana spoke slowly and distinctly from her gilt, round-backed,

Reds Smash Into U. S. Office, Open Files in Berlin Rioting; Americans Defy Ouster Order

USE BATTERING RAMS—Communist-led demonstrators smash their way into Berlin's city hall yesterday while trying to keep Berlin city council from meeting. Soviet-controlled police made no attempt to halt the demonstration, third of its kind occurring within the last 10 days

City Government Takes Refuge in West After Mob Invades City Hall

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP).—Russian-backed German police broke into an American office in the Berlin city hall tonight and carried off 19 Germans of the rival western police force, handcuffed and in chains.

Then a Russian officer, with 10 soldiers carrying tommy-guns at his side, demanded that all Allied uniformed personnel leave the building. They refused.

The 19 policemen had sought refuge there earlier from Communist-led gangs which smashed into the building with battering rams and forced the elected city government to withdraw to western Berlin.

The Soviet-directed invasion of American property came as the American, British, French and Russian military governors conferred 3 miles away on steps to end the 75-day crisis resulting from the Russian blockade of the city. They broke up without comment, and will meet again tomorrow.

Western Officers Stand Firm

The Soviet-supported police forced their way into the American office after a towering Russian major had demanded that liaison officers of the three western powers leave the building, which is in the Soviet sector of the city. When the western officers stood firm, the Russians did not press their demand.

Twenty-seven more western policemen still were hidden in the British and French liaison offices tonight. Western power liaison officers repeatedly rejected demands for information on them.

In their invasion of the United States office, the police looked through filing cabinets but did not take anything out.

The incidents again brought four-power relations in Berlin to the breaking point.

Lights burned late tonight in the office of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor, where he hurried after today's four-power meeting. Neither he nor Col. Frank Howley, the American commandant, made any statement.

Berlin Police Split

The Berlin police force has waged a near-civil war since it split into east and west camps weeks ago. Western police who ventured into the Russian part of town were seized on sight.

Forty-six policemen were taken to city hall today to protect government officials. A British military government statement

Yalta, Potsdam Defended

No Pact Could Have Avoided Berlin Blockade, Byrnes Says

(Text of Byrnes Address on Page 8)

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 6 (Special).—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes tonight disputed the charge that the United States was "hornswoggled and overreached" in its wartime agreements with the Soviet Union.

The former Secretary, who took part in the Yalta and Potsdam conferences, said the wartime agreements gave the Russians "very little that they were not in a position to take without agreement."

He reminded the American Bar Association at its opening session that "Soviet control does not extend beyond the lines its armies occupied except one area in Europe." This area was the German territory east of the Elbe, which had been assigned to the Russians at Yalta in February, 1945.

U. S. Advance Underestimated

At the time of Yalta, said Byrnes, "no one of our military chiefs had any idea we would reach Berlin before the Soviets did." Likewise, he said, the military commanders underestimated the ability of Gen. George S. Patton's army to reach Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, ahead of the Russians.

He argued that a more precise definition of American rights in Berlin in 1945 would not have deterred the Russians from their present blockade. In Berlin and elsewhere, he said, the Russians have found the wartime agreements such obstacles to their expansion that they have had to violate nearly all of them.

"If the agreements were such concessions or gifts by Churchill and Roosevelt to the Soviets," he said, "it is rather peculiar that the Soviets had to violate them."

Byrnes' speech tonight was not only a counterattack against campaign criticisms of Yalta, but it was also his first major pronouncement on foreign policy in several months.

3 Conditions for Treaty

He reaffirmed his earlier belief that the Russians do not want war, but would like to get what they can without war. He cautioned against giving "the false impression that we are only concerned ith an all-out power struggle with Soviet Russia."

He expressed the hope that the "great unrest in eastern Europe" and "the natural longing of the Russian people for peace" might in-

Back in Good Standing, Gomulka Says

Rift Healed, Reds Told at Warsaw; Purge Guide Given

Warsaw, Sept. 6 (AP).—Vice Premier Wladyslaw Gomulka told Poland's Communist chiefs tonight he has patched up his ideological differences in the party leadership.

This development occurred after President Boleslaw Bierut gave the Communist Workers Party an eight-point program for purging its ranks of those who deviate from the Moscow line of international communism.

Gomulka, replaced by Bierut as secretary-general of the party, was present at the meeting of district party chiefs and organizers. Bierut presented his program at the party council of war to close the wide split over national and international brands of communism which imperil the party's grip on Poland.

Gomulka lost his job, a party statement said Sunday, because of his support of Premier-Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia against the Communist International Information Bureau (Cominform). Also, he disagreed with party policy on the socialization of peasants' farms.

It was announced Gomulka would retain his government post as first vice premier and minister for western territories. Bierut remains chief of state in addition to his new party duties. Gomulka was said by the party's executive committee to have admitted he was in error in opposing the Cominform.

The newspaper Robotnik, chief organ of the leftwing Socialist Party headed by Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz, said editorially the Socialists soon would merge with

'As Propaganda Maneuver'

Russia's Plan for Italian Prewar Colonies Criticized

Top American Government officials yesterday privately criticized as "a propaganda maneuver" Russia's unexpected request for new four-power discussions on the fate of Italy's prewar colonies.

This American reaction foreshadowed possible rejection by the United States, Britain and France of Moscow's bid for a special session of the Foreign Ministers on the matter September 15.

These qualified United States officials, who requested their identity be withheld, said they regarded the Russian note proposing these talks as an obvious attempt to embarrass the Western powers.

Russia realizes, they said, there is virtually no chance of arranging such a meeting on such a short notice, six days before the United Nations Assembly is scheduled to tackle the same issue.

But Moscow publicly called for the discussions anyhow, these officials said, in an effort to "confuse" the world into believing the West was turning down an attempt to reach an understanding with Russia.

Officially, the State Department declined to comment on the Russian note which was received after radio Moscow broadcast its contents.

Soviet Proposes Study Of Italian Colonies' Fate

London, Sept. 6 (NYHT).—The British Foreign Office "considered" today Soviet Russia's proposal for a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers to study the Big Four dispute over disposal of Italy's African colonies. The situation created by the Soviet proposal was described as "awkward," at best.

Soviet Progress In Planes Called 'Remarkable'

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—The editor of the authoritative Jane's All the World's Aircraft said today the Soviet Union has been making "remarkable progress" in aviation.

Aviation developments in Russia, however, are an enigma to the rest of the world, Editor Leonard Bridgman said in a preface to the 1948 edition. Any information about Russian jet planes that has reached the Western nations probably has trickled out of Russia "by design," he said.

The new edition of Jane's, which carries photographs and descriptions of jet-propelled planes of other nations, presents only drawings of Soviet craft based on telescopic photographs taken by a newspaper reporter at the 1947 aviation display in Moscow.

"Experimental establishments, factories, equipment, protoypes and, in particular, technicians, have all been taken over and this merged into Russia's gigantic aircraft industry. This industrial potential has, no doubt, been responsible for the remarkable progress which has taken place (in Russia) in recent years."

Thief Due for Shock

Paris, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—A thief snatched a yellow suitcase from a parked automobile belonging to animal trainer Jean Bertolio, but Bertolio was not particularly concerned about the theft. He told police the suitcase contained a baby python nine feet long and weighing 25 pounds.

Dewey Retained Some Democrats

officials and top-ranking employes as some of his political advisers had urged him to do. In fact, it would be difficult to prove that he fired more than a handful for political reasons.

Over the strenuous opposition of GOP politicians, he kept in his State "cabinet" several members who had been appointed by previous Democratic Governors because they met his high standards of competence, efficiency, and political independence.

Top jobs outside of Civil Service that were held by career people were not touched for political reasons even though he could have easily ousted the incumbents and could have appointed his own followers to them.

He did not take any sizable number of jobs outside of the State's respected Civil Service system.

He vetoed all bills passed by the legislature to give special job and retirement benefits to favorite groups of employes.

He has worked closely and has negotiated personally with the employes on their problems through the legitimate union representatives.

He has inaugurated many reforms that have benefited the State's workers—reforms that have brought about better salaries, working conditions and better government, and

He has concentrated on cleaning out the "cobwebs" in the State offices—improving administration generally by his leadership—and he has been gratified by the enthusiastic response of the Civil Service employes to it.

But on the other hand Dewey has:

Set up a "cold and practical" patronage system that deals in a minority of State jobs—a system that is operated from his front office.

Failed to follow through on his campaign promises to bring additional State jobs under the competitive Civil Service system. In fact, the State today has a record number of jobs exempted from the merit system—jobs that could be used for political purposes, and

Kluttz Dewey

He has what is generally considered to be a mediocre Civil Service Commission. As one top Dewey aide put it, "The three-man nonpartisan commission is the weakest link in Dewey's strong administrative chain of command."

The evidence to back up these statements will come later. It's pertinent at this time to go back to Dewey's pre-Governor days in order to get a fuller and broader picture of his employe philosophy.

For example, as District Attorney of New York County, Dewey set higher standards for the jobs in his office than would have been fixed by the State Civil Service Commission. He cleaned the political hacks out of the office such as the "process server" whose single job was to look after the D. A.'s hat and coat. He promoted, regardless of politics, such men as Frank Hogan, the present D. A., who is a Democrat. He would hire Republicans for the jobs exempted by Civil Service only on the condition that no Democrats were better qualified for them.

In his campaign for Governor, Dewey went out of his way to promise New Yorkers the best Civil Service system in the Nation. He made the democratic administration of Civil Service a hot issue. In one speech, he said the people didn't realize the importance of an effective Civil Service and that they do not insist on honest non-political administrations. He referred to the State Civil Service Commission as that "vital and almost forgotten portion of our State government" and he charged the Democrats had allowed it to break down. He said:

"The breakdown of Civil Service is a blow at the heart of government. Its restoration will bring back confidence in the government. It will help to check the influence of unworthy elements in our political life. It will preserve in State affairs the loyalty and devotion of the great body of public servants . . . The most important services of the State are bound to break down when Civil Service men and women are ignored."

Dewey attacked the system of temporary and provisional appointments as "showing something rotten in Denmark." He said the "most flagrant inroads into the merit system are in provisional appointments." (Incidentally, tens of thousands of Federal workers today hold temporary and provisional (war service) appointments.)

In that campaign, Dewey was running against Gov. Herbert Lehman, a Democrat, who was widely considered a "Civil Service Governor," one of the very best New York State employes have ever had. But Dewey made the Civil Service such an issue that Lehman, after his reelection, appointed a committee to look into the advisability of extending the merit system. As a result, several thousand additional State jobs were brought in under the competitive system.

In those days Dewey was the darling of every stanch advocate of Civil Service.

In Wednesday's paper, Jerry Kluttz will analyze Dewey's civil service record as Governor of New York State.

Text of Truman's Speech in Opening Campaign at Detroit

Detroit, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The text of President Truman's speech here today follows:

MR. MAYOR, distinguished leaders of labor and fellow citizens, this, in my opinion, is a great day for labor. This is a great day for the country. When I can stand on the same platform in city hall in Detroit with the mayor and Walter Reuther and Frank Martell, I know that the country's on the road to recovery.

I am more than happy to join in this Labor Day celebration.

I am more than happy to be present when the CIO and the AFL are marching together side by side in the interest of the country.

In unity there is strength. Working people need every ounce of strength they possess to meet today's problems. Forces in the world and our Government would destroy free labor. Therefore I am urging you with everything I have to send a Congressman from Michigan who will go along with me on that program.

As you know I speak plainly sometimes—in fact, I speak bluntly sometimes. I am going to speak plainly and bluntly today.

These are critical times for labor. And for all who work. There's great danger ahead. Right now, the whole future of labor is wrapped up in one simple proposition.

IF IN this next election, you get a Congress and an Administration friendly to labor, you'll have much to hope for. If you get an Administration and a Congress unfriendly to labor, you'll have much to fear and you'd better look out.

I believe that a strong and free labor movement constitutes a tremendous force for preserving our form of Government. A free and strong labor movement is our best bulwark against communism.

To remain strong and free you must have a friendly Administration and a friendly Congress.

There's only one test of friendship: the test of the heart. You know without being told who is your friend and who is not your friend.

Look back over the years. Between 1900 and 1933 labor was dealt body blows.

In each case, these blows coincided with depressions, which occurred under Republican Administrations and Republican Congresses.

In the depression years of 1907 and 1908, sweeping injunctions were used to weaken labor and send its trusted leaders to jail. But another blow to the heart of labor came in 1921, when the Republican depression put nearly six million workers out of employment.

THE strength of labor organizations dropped off. A vicious campaign of antilabor propaganda swept the country. It was an era of the open shop and yellow-dog contract. A few years passed and you all remember, came the Republican panic of 1930, and the great depression, which dealt the workers of the country a terrible blow.

There was no unemployment compensation under the Republicans. There was no floor under wages under the Republicans. Average hourly earnings in 1932 were only 45 cents—under the Republicans.

From 12 million to 15 million workers were out of work and unemployed—under the Republicans.

Then, in 1933, came the administration of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

For the first time, labor received the recognition and encouragement that it needs—that it merits. By constructive legislation President Roosevelt and a sympathetic Congress corrected many of the abuses against labor—against which labor had been contending.

That Democratic administration of which I was a part from 1935 passed the Wagner Act, to assure fair collective bargaining, abolished the sweat shop, provided unemployment compensation, passed the Social Security Act, saved millions of worker's homes from foreclosure, brought the average wage from 45 cents to $1.33 an hour.

YOU all remember how a Democratic Administration turned the greatest depression in history into the most prosperous era the country's ever seen.

Sixty-one million people are employed today. The gains of labor were not accomplished at the expense of the rest of the Nation.

Labor gains contributed to the Nation's general prosperity.

Incomes of farmers and businessmen are higher than ever before in the history of the world.

But we still have to fight to keep the gains that we have made in the last 16 years. The plain fact is that these gains are under heavy attack by the spokesmen of reaction.

Two years ago, the people of this country, and many working men among them, seemed to feel that they wanted a change. They elected the Republican Eightieth Congress—and they got their change. That Congress promptly fell into the familiar Republican pattern of aid for big business and attack on labor.

The Eightieth Congress voted themselves a cut in taxes, and voted you a cut in freedom. The Eightieth Republican Congress failed to crack down on prices. But it cracked down on labor, all right.

The Republicans failed to give the consumers of America protection against the rising cost of living. We find they put a dangerous weapon into the hands of the big corporations in the shape of the Taft-Hartley law, which I vetoed, but which was passed over my veto.

The union men to whom I have talked tell me that labor is just beginning to feel the effects of the Taft-Hartley law.

And you and I know that the Taft-Hartley law is only a foretaste of what you will get if the Republican reaction is allowed to continue to grow.

What Republican newspapers have already announced in plain language, the Republicans in Congress are preparing further and stronger measures against labor.

If the congressional elements that made the Taft-Hartley Law are allowed to remain in power, and if these elements are further encouraged by the election of a Republican President, you men of labor can expect to be hit by a steady barrage of body blows.

AND if you stay at home, as you did in 1946, and help these reactionaries in power, you deserve every blow you get.

No only the labor unions, but all men and women who work are in danger. And the danger is greatest for those who do not belong to unions.

If anything, the blows will fall most severely on the white-collar workers and the unorganized workers. And that's not all. If this Taft-Hartley Law remains in effect, labor's position will be bad enough.

But suppose, while that law is in effect, a reactionary Republican Administration were to bring upon us another boom-and-bust cycle similar to that which struck us during the last Republican Administration.

I don't have to tell you that that is an exceedingly real possibility, if the Republicans get control of this country again. You can already see signs of it. The boom is on for them. And the bust has begun for you.

If you let the Republican reactionaries get control of this Government, the position of labor will be so greatly weakened that I would fear not only for the wages and living standards of the American working man, but even for our democratic institutions of free labor and free enterprise.

REMEMBER, the reactionary of today is a shrewd man. He is in many ways much shrewder than the reactionary of the 1920s. He is a man with a calculating machine where his heart ought to be. He has learned a great deal about how to get his way by observing demagogues and reactionaries in other countries. And now, he has many able allies in the press, and in the radio.

If you place the Government of this country under control of those who hate labor, who can you blame if measures are thereafter adopted that destroy the power, prestige and earning power of labor? I tell you that labor must fight harder than ever before to make sure that its rights are kept intact.

In practical terms, this means a powerful political effort which must culminate in an all-out vote on election day. Anything short of an all-out vote would be a betrayal of labor by its own interests.

It's not only the rights of the unions which are at stake, but the standard of living of your family. If prices are permitted to rise unchecked, it is your wives and your children who will suffer.

As real wages decline in the face of rising prices, it is the housewife who must try desperately to feed and clothe her family, while her buying power is steadily whittled away.

MY SYMPATHY is with those best of business managers, the wives and mothers of this Nation.

Think how they have made the pay envelopes stretch, with each rise in price.

Now, mother has to outfit the children for school at outrageous prices. How she does it, I don't know. I tried to help her out in this terrible price situation, but I got absolutely no help from that "do-nothing" Eightieth Republican Congress.

Make no mistake, you are face to face with a struggle to preserve the very foundations of your rights and your standards of living.

If we are to have a reactionary administration in the years ahead, labor could be only on the defensive fighting a losing fight. If you produce a smashing victory at the polls, you have much to hope for.

Given such a victory, I foresee the time, and not far off, when it will be possible to develop a new and sounder program of labor relations for the Nation; when it will be possible for labor to obtain a more equitable share of the Nation's increased productivity than it ever has had.

As a basis for such a new program of labor relations, I think it is clear that labor will need to link its position more closely with that of the farmers and the small businessman.

I know from my own experience with labor leaders and unions that the ability of labor to discipline itself and to cooperate with other groups in the country is steadily growing.

During the war, when I was surveying American industry as chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee, I came to know the conditions under which labor works and lives. I came to know and respect the minds and spirit of workers and union leaders. I saw them and talked to them, and visited their homes in scores of communities. I watched them at work in hundreds of plants.

I know that labor is just as willing as any other group in the country to cooperate with intelligent programs in the interest of the Nation as a whole.

I am one of those who believes in the fundamental good sense and good feeling of the American people. It is my conviction that Republican reaction will be rejected. The American public wants a Congress and an Administration that will play fair with labor. The people will support a program under which labor makes gains consistent with the progress of our total economy.

I said a moment ago that the public is full of good feeling and good sense. That is certainly true of the great majority.

Nevertheless, I must point out that there are too many short-sighted and unthinking Americans who have adopted a "damn labor" attitude which doesn't become any citizen of this country.

It is time that every American recognize what our fathers knew—that it is an honorable thing to work with your hands.

Our basic social freedoms can be traced largely to the fact that labor had its birth of real freedom in the United States of America. That is why our fathers came to America—to find the country where the man who worked with his hands is as good as the next man.

Today, too many Americans in dining cars, in country clubs and fashionable resorts, are repeating, like parrots, the phrase "Labor must be kept in its place." It is time that all Americans realize that the place of labor is side by side with the businessman and with the farmers, and not one degree lower.

One of the aspects of this Taft-Hartley agitation that has been most shocking to me has been the Republican attitude as expressed in the pious speeches of some of their leaders in government and in business. They seem to think that labor is some kind of a spoiled child that needs to be spanked. They lift their eyes sympathetically and say "it hurts me more than it hurts you." It does not hurt them one bit, but it certainly does hurt you.

In practical terms, it means that labor needs to unite in common causes.

They must unite, and it'll be a great day for labor and a great day for the country when it happens.

All labor stands at the crossroads today. You can elect a reactionary Administration and go into an era of fear.

You can elect a Congress and an Administration which stand ready to play fair with every element of American life and enter a new period of hope.

The choice is yours.

Do you want to carry the Taft-Hartley law to its full implication and totally enslave the working man, white-collar and union man alike?

Or do you want to go forward with an Administration whose interest is the welfare of the common man?

Labor's always had to fight for its gains. Now you're fighting for the whole future of the labor movement. We are in a hard, tough fight against rich opponents. They know they can't count on your votes. Their only hope is that you won't vote at all.

They've misjudged you. I know that we're going to win this crusade for the right.

Truman Urges Full Vote by Workers an impassioned get-out-the-vote appeal.

"If you all go to the polls," he said, "I won't have to worry about moving out of the White House, and I won't have another Eightieth Congress."

In his Detroit speech, Mr. Truman told the automobile workers and others that if they allowed the Republicans to hold Congress and capture the White House, they would be in "great danger."

"We are in a hard, tough fight against shrewd and rich opponents," he said. "They know they can't count on your vote. Their only hope is that you won't vote at all. They have misjudged you. I know that we are going to win this crusade for the right."

He added:

"If you let the Republican reactionaries get complete control of this Government, the position of labor will be so greatly weakened that I would fear, not only for the wages and living standards of the American working man, but even for our democratic institution of free labor and free enterprise."

Always he hammered on an all-out vote by labor. At Pontiac he said:

"A light vote favors the Republicans. You know, they have got out a pamphlet to their workers in which they urge their workers not to get out the vote. They say a heavy vote helps the Democrats and a light vote helps the Republicans. Now bear that in mind."

Mr. Truman, in his Detroit address, spoke from what was described as a rough outline. However, he stuck to it closely, and his style lacked some of the fire that marked his acceptance speech at Philadelphia in July.

Reuther on Platform

Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), was on the platform with Mr. Truman, and so was Frank X. Martel, head of the American Federation of Labor in Detroit. Both pledged him their support.

Reuther, who was shot by a would-be assassin several months ago, looked pallid and his right arm still was in a cast. However, he had plenty of fire in his voice when he told the crowd:

"The Republican Eightieth Congress has again started us down Herbie Hoover's Wall Street economic superhighway, which is the shortest road to depression and war."

President Truman, who followed Reuther to the microphone, said that the 1948 type of Republican reactionary was a man with "a calculating machine where his heart ought to be."

He warned that the Taft-Hartley act was only a foretaste of what is to come if Republican reaction is allowed to gain in strength.

One danger, he said, was another boom-and-bust cycle.

"You can already see signs of it," he said. "The boom is on for them (the Republican reactionaries), and the bust is on for you."

Mr. Truman did not once mention his Republican rival for the Presidency, Governor Dewey of New York, who was born in Michigan.

However, in the course of five speeches today, he repeatedly called on the workers to help him defeat Dewey and elect a Democratic Congress in November.

Telling what would happen if the Republicans take over the National Government, the President said:

"You men of labor can expect to be hit by a steady barrage of body blows. And if you stay at home on election day, you deserve every blow you get."

Count on Heavy Vote

Democratic strategists, aware that Mr. Truman has an uphill fight in '48, concluded some time ago that the only chance for victory lay in a great outpouring of voters—60 million or so. They concluded also that this would come only if those in the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations got out and started ringing door bells.

And so it was that today Mr. Truman coupled his warning to labor with an appeal for an all-out vote.

Political observers in Detroit said that right now it looked as if Michigan would give its 19 electoral votes to Dewey in November. They recalled that Franklin D. Roosevelt carried the State by only 22,000 votes in 1944.

Henry Wallace, candidate of the Progressive Party, is on the ballot in the Wolverine State, and is expected to poll anywhere from 25,000 to 100,000 votes.

Wallace supporters, standing in Cadillac Square today, were carrying placards which read: "Wallace or war," "Ford workers for Wallace," and "Wallace for labor—labor for Wallace."

Sigler Boards Train

On the way to Detroit, during a stop at Lansing, Michigan's Republican Governor, Kim Sigler, boarded the presidential special and extended greetings to Mr. Truman.

From Detroit, Mr. Truman motored to Pontiac, stopping en route in the great Polish area of Hamtramck. He was told that Hamtramck was 97 per cent Democratic.

"Now I wonder what's the matter with that other 3 per cent?" Truman asked, amidst laughter. "See what you can do about that in November."

After excoriating the Eightieeth Congress, he said:

"Now, if you return them again this fall, you will get just what is coming to you. I don't think you are going to return them. I don't see how you can."

Opens in Grand Rapids

Mr. Truman opened his oratorial marathon this morning in Grand Rapids, Senator Vandenberg's home town. It was 8:15 o'clock, rain was falling, and it was a holiday. Nevertheless, a crowd of 20,000 was gathered in Campus Square.

After receiving two keys to the city, the President referred to his "good friend and former colleague; Senator Vandenberg. He recalled that they were Senate colleagues for 10 years.

"While we didn't always agree on domestic problems," he said, "I will say this to you, that Senator Vendenberg is intellectually honest and I like him."

He noted that there were three Congressional Medal of Honor men in the honor guard that turned out for him.

"When the war ended," Mr. Truman continued, "there were 12,500,000 young men and young women in the armed forces of the United States. They were a cross-section of the country, just as these three young men are a cross-section of the country.

"I am not alarmed about the future of the United States as long as we have young men and young women like that . . .

"We are still making a fight for an honorable peace and a just peace in the world. And I am here to tell you we are going to get it before we get through."

In Grand Rapids Mr. Truman struck a note that was to run through every one of his five Labor Day speeches. After saying that the forthcoming election will determine "destiny for years to come," he declared:

"Now, the necessity that faces us in the voting on November 2. You must register, you must vote if you expect to get a square deal in this great Nation.

"It doesn't do any good to talk about voting if you are not on the books. It doesn't do any good to talk about voting if you sit around on election day, too lazy to turn out. The interests of this great Nation are such that every man and woman of voting age ought to turn out and vote on November 2.

"If you will do that, I am perfectly willing to abide by the result, because I know it will be right."

Mr. Truman said that there were just "two parties to choose from in this election."

There was a burst of good-natured laughter at this point on the part of citizens who were conscious of Henry Wallace, the Progressive Party candidate, and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the States' Rights or Dixiecrat candidate.

Mr. Truman grinned himself and then went on to say that the choice was between "the Democratic Party, which stands for peace and the welfare of the people and the little man, and the Republican Party, which stands for special interests."

He recalled how prices were kept at a fairly reasonable level during the war years.

"We could halt rising prices now, he said, "it would be just as easy as it was during the war. But the Republican Eightieth Congress would not pass a price control law, although I recommended that they do that time and time again."

He also told of his vain efforts to get Congress to pass a housing law.

"I am told," he said, "that within the sound of my voice there are 62 veterans and their families with small children living in what was formerly a furniture factory here in the heart of this city, subject to all the noise and confusion that goes on in a busy city."

He told how the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill cleared the Senate and then was bottled up in the House by the Rules Committee.

"When it was time for that bill to be pushed through the House," he said, "Senator Taft ran out on his own bill. I am sorry to say that."

The Chief Executive went after Taft again when his train stopped at Lansing, where a crowd of between 5000 and 7000 gathered along the railroad tracks.

He said that the housing bill would have been passed had Taft not run out on it.

"He (Taft) decided that the real estate lobby should be kow-towed to. That is one of the most powerful lobbies that ever has been in Washington.

"Before this campaign is over, I am going to tell you about a lot more lobbies, the lobby that got the rich man's tax bill through and several others I will talk to you about."

Inter-Parliamentary Union Gets Plea for United Europe

Rome, Sept. 6 (AP).—Talks on peace, a union of European nations and the work of the United Nations today concerned delegates from the parliaments of 39 countries. They opened the second postwar congress of the 60-year-old Inter-Parliamentary Union.

Carlo Sforza, Italy's foreign minister, urged the delegates to work for a federated Europe to safeguard world peace "in this grave hour." Sforza said: "again the Balkans contain danger for all Europe. Today Europe is the danger of all the world."

Senator Alben W. Barkley, United States Democratic nominee for Vice President, opened the general debate and said: The United States stands for "a high union of states to reach a firm common accord." Barkley is chairman of the United States delegation.

Vladimir Simic of Yugoslavia defended the U. N. and said the veto in the Security Council had kept the U. N. from foundering.

Edward Ludwig of Austria said the U. N. and "all other postwar diplomatic conferences" had "come to naught." He said: "We really need a strong strain of optimism to believe in permanent peace."

Viscount Stansgate, president of the union and Britain's chief delegate, said the union should work toward "universality and brotherly collaboration among all peoples."

Raif Bellama of Lebanon said the U. N. departed from "its basic principles in its unfortunate decision to partition Palestine."

Airline Pilot Wins Trophy, $16,000 in Cleveland Races had appeared certain of first place and a new record.

Johnson's winning speed for the 300-miles dash around the pylons was 383.767 miles an hour—more than 12 miles an hour slower than the record time set a year ago. He flew an F-51 North American Mustang, the pot-bellied all-around star of World War II fighters.

Second and third places went to the two oldest pilots in the race.

Bruce E. Raymond, 46, of Hammond, Ind., averaged 365.234 miles and hour to take $8000 second place in an F-51.

Wilson V. Newhall, an Illinois National Guard colonel, who has been racing since 1929, took third place and $4500 in an F-63 Bell Kingcobra.

Wins Additional $500

Johnson got an additional $500 for having five of the fastest laps.

Brown won $1300 in lap prizes and Cook Cleland of Cleveland, won $200 in lap money.

Because of the short finishing field and failure to set a record, $9500 in prize money went begging.

Brown flew the toughest luck race of the three-day meet.

He got his sharp-nosed yellow F-39 Bell Airacobra off the ground first, kept ahead of Cleland and Richard Becker of Toledo, Ohio, flying a second Cleland entry without much trouble. After Cleland and Becker quit, it was just a matter of driving around the course.

Brown turned in 413.097 miles an hour for the fastest lap of the race.

After starting out as a windy day unfit for high speeds, the weather cleared and the classic finale was run in nearly ideal weather. The crowd, estimated at 80,000 by race officials, was the largest of the three days.

Jet Attempt Canceled

However, the early turbulence caused the Air Force to cancel its attempt to set a new world speed record in an F-86 North American swept-wing jet fighter.

The plane, piloted by Maj. Richard L. Johnson, Wright Field test pilot, averaged 669 miles an hour in three passes over an official record course yesterday.

However, the rules call for timing four laps and the whole effort was disqualified.

Herman R. (Fish) Salmon, flying his sleek little "Minnow," became the midget champion by winning the Goodyear trophy and $7400 in prize money. Salmon won third place last year. He brought the ship back with several streamlining modifications and proved they helped his speed.

His average of 169.6 miles an hour was four miles better than the 1946 winning speed of Steve Wittman of Oshkosh, Wis., who finished second today in a new racer.

Red-Backed Police Smash Into U. S. Office

termed the move "unwise" but expressed sympathy for the city government's attempt to have an orderly meeting in the face of Russian refusals to furnish police protection.

The Soviet-licensed German news agency ADN said the 19 seized policemen were taken to criminal police headquarters for a "thorough examination." In the regime of Adolf Hitler this building was used by the gestapo.

The agency said passes were found on the 19 issued by Acting Mayor Ferdinand Friedensburg ordering them to report to him today "to support me in maintaining the rights inherent in me as custodian of city hall."

Late tonight most of the Russian-controlled German police had left the city hall building. A strong force of them was maintained outside, however.

The Soviet action climaxed a day of rioting in which Red action squads smashed into the city hall, beat up two American reporters and seized the council chamber.

Maj. John E. Davisson, the American liaison officer, refused to get out and telephoned Colonel Howley for instructions. Howley summoned his staff into urgent conference.

After the western officer refused to leave, the Russian major walked out of the building, saying, "You can stay here all night if you want to but we are going to eat."

Despite the police protection, Communist-led agitators forced the elected city government to call off its meeting and seek protection in the western sector of the city.

The rioting and subsequent developments cast grave doubts on chances for an East-West agreement over Soviet-blockaded Berlin which brought the Allied military governors together today for the sixth time.

In refusing the Russian demand to hand over the western Berlin police, Davisson told the Russians they would have to "break down the doors" in order to get them.

The Soviet-controlled police force broke into the American offices and rifled American files. Davisson, whose home is in West Philadelphia, Pa., said: "I most strongly protest this breaking into American offices by German police."

The Russian liaison officer accused Davisson of "barboring people he shouldn't be harboring."

An east sector deputy police chief said he used force to enter the American liaison offices at the "orders of the Russians."

Outside the city hall Russian military police seized two American buses. Corpl. Paul Clements, El Paso, Tex., said armed Russians pushed him out and commandeered the vehicles. He was released after being held a short time but two German bus drivers remained in Soviet custody.

The anti-Communist city government decided at its meeting in the western zone to conduct new municipal elections November 14. This is opposed by the Communists, who won only 18 per cent of the vote in the 1946 elections.

Communist leaders, sitting tight in possession of the city hall, announced a news conference would be held there at noon tomorrow, when they are expected to disclose their future plans.

Colonel Howley said he suspected the Communists would retain control of the city hall if the city government decides to remain permanently in western Berlin.

This would mean the end of unified city government in Soviet-blockaded Berlin.

The rioting drove the anti-Communist city council from the city hall to the safety of a building of the technical university in the British sector.

There the city government strongly indicated it would not return again to the city hall unless it obtains police protection.

The Communists already have a "democratic front" prepared to proclaim itself ruler of Berlin if the city council decides to stay permanently in the western sector.

Ernest Leiser, overseas news agency correspondent, and Joseph Evans of the Wall Street Journal, were injured in the rioting that broke out in the city hall after the demonstrators smashed their way in.

Evans said the Soviet-controlled police, who again today failed to lift a finger against the demonstrators, "threw me down a flight of stairs."

He had gone to the aid of Leiser, who was being beaten. Earlier Leiser had tried to help Associated Press Photographer Henry Burroughs who was attacked and his camera smashed.

Burroughs formerly worked in Washington for The Washington Post and then the Associated Press.

The Communist demonstrators grabbed a telephone out of the hands of Associated Press Correspondent Richard Kasischke, then ripped out the phone plugs.

Colonel Howley charged that failure of the Russians to provide police protection violated international responsibilities and was "one more agreement broken by the Soviets."

Howley said the Russians had tried to oust the government ever since it was formed because "they're sore that the Communists got only 18 per cent of the vote in the elections two years ago."

Juliana Takes Oath as Queen

Juliana Van Orange-Nassau, wearing the same regal robes her mother, Wilhelmina, wore when she ascended the throne of the Netherlands, is escorted by Prince Consort Bernhurd, now Prince of the Netherlands, during ceremony yesterday red-tapestried chair. She moved slowly back and forth with visible signs of nervousness. She looked repeatedly at her mother, her four daughters and at her husband, Prince Bernhard.

Outside, Amsterdam's great square—Grand Dam—was jammed with hundreds of thousands of persons.

Juliana wore the official inauguration robes—a mantle of red and purple velvet studded with gold lions and lines and trimmed with ermine. She wore no crown, only a small cap glittering with jewels. The rich gold and ruby crown, made for the inauguration of King William II, lay on a table beside the royal scepter.

Heralds in brilliant orange and blue balloon knee breeches, courtiers in scarlet, officers of the armed forces in navy blue and gold, chamberlains in deep green and gold preceded the Queen and her consort, Prince Bernhard, when the procession emerged from the palace. They turned left at the foot of the short flight of palace steps, and then crossed the bottom of the palace square to the Nieuw Church on the corner. 75 yards away.

Juliana herself, was the magnificent centerpiece of the tableau. Her dress was a departure from the traditional white for such royal ceremonies. She wore deep blue satin, a cape of scarlet velvet embellished with Netherlands lions in gold brocade and lined with ermine, and on her auburn hair a tiny Juliet cap of rubies, diamonds and appeals. The cape was the same which her mother wore at the ceremony 50 years ago.

The procession took five minutes to move the 75 yards. The clarion of the royal palace tower pealed out in triumph the national anthem of the Netherlands, joined by the great organ of the church, which was being relayed across the square through loudspeakers.

A scarlet carpet—brushed to a perfect sheen by a little man who worked in his stocking feet until two minutes before the royal procession appeared—was spread from the palace to the church door. Overhead was draped a covering of fish nets, symbol of Holland's industry and commerce, which were also used at Wilhelmina's inauguration. Guards, who stood at attention for hours, lined the way.

A stream of royal visitors and their suites from Great Britain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Luxembourg, Belgium and Greece preceded Juliana's party down the carpet into the church. By specific request of the lord chamberlain of the Netherlands court, all women wore light-colored dress; black, symbol of the oppression of the German occupation, having been forbidden.

Princess Margaret of England, in coral pink moire satin with a tight bodice and waist, three-quarter sleeves, deep neckline and a skirt billowing like something out of Hans Christian Andersen, got the biggest hand of all. Even a horse let out a loud whinny when she passed.

Inside, the ceremony was brisk and to the point. Juliana, nervous and tense at first, gradually mastered her spirits and spoke the constitutional oath in clear, ringing, stirring tones. The president of the Dutch Parliament responded with a short speech and then each member of the Parliament, in turn, followed him in swearing allegiance to the crown.

Of the 12 Communist members of Parliament, only eight took the oath. The other four, including the secretary general of the party, sent their regrets. This could pose an awkward constitutional point, but the Dutch probably will ignore the situation.

Today's events, so far as the public was concerned, closed with a great parade around the city. The royal family, Juliana—mother as well as Queen, as she said in her address—and three of the four princesses and their father, Prince Bernhard, rode in a great gold state coach.

On the balcony later, they all appeared before thousands of cheering people jammed into the palace square, Juliana holding 18-month-old Princess Maarijke, dressed in royal robes for the occasion.

Reds Prepare For New War.

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—A Russian jet propulsion expert and former aide to Marshal Vassili D. Sokolovsky, charged today that the Soviet Union politburo is preparing for a third world war.

Lieut. Col. Gregory Tokayev, of the Red army, who recently fled to the British zone of Germany and then to Britain told a press conference:

"A third world war is being prepared.

"Pioneers in these preparations are the 14 members and alternates of the Politburo."

Tokayev declared that 90 per cent of the Russian people and 70 per cent of the Russian Communism party would not support the present regime in a free election.

The Politburo is the highest executive body of the Soviet Communist Party. Its members include Premier Josef Stalin and Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Wheelbarrow Envoy Due Here On World Tour

Larry Hightower, a one-time artilleryman and cowboy who now is walking behind a wheelbarrow around the world, is due in Washington this morning en route to Texas, Mexico and South America on what he terms an extended goodwill tour.

Hightower has pushed his wheelbarrow through 19 States, Canada and Mexico, he says, since he started his walking tour at Ellensburg, Wash., July 4, 1946. That was 14 pairs of shoes and 17,004 miles ago, he added as he rested yesterday at Heisley's Garage, a mile south of Laurel, Md.

Hightower says he expects to put in 12 years making his trip and then to write a book. He travels, he says, about 18 miles a day.

Polish Rift Shatters Communist Illusion

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The British Foreign Office said today the ousting from office of Polish Communist Chief Wladislaw Gomulka marks the end of a Kremlin illusion that universal Communist rule means universal tranquility.

The Foreign Office, in one of its rare statements on the internal affairs of another country, said it is a characteristic sign of conditions in the Communist camp, if the Kremlin no longer can trust a man it has handpicked and trained for the job of looking after its affairs in Poland.

Gomulka, Vice Premier and Minister for Regained Territories, was fired as secretary general of the Polish Communist Party yesterday because of "nationalist Communistic tendencies." That is the same reason Yugoslavia's Premier Marshal Joseph Broz Tito was excommunicated from the Communist Information Bureau. It means both have refused to follow Premier Josef Stalin's Communist line.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the British government places the firing of Gomulka on the same level of importance as the censure of Tito.

the Communists. Both groups, the paper said, are battling nitionalism.

This was the eight-point directive given to the party workers as things which must be done to heal the breach and prepare for the long-sought merger with the left-wing Polish Socialists:

1. Purify the party by throwing out all members of questionable loyalty or suspected of "rightist and nationalist deviation."

2. Eliminate capitalism in peasant villages by establishing co-operatives to handle farm production.

3. Sharpen party discipline and screen thoroughly all applicants for membership.

War on "U. S. Imperialism"

4. Wage unceasing war against "American imperialism" and infiltration of foreign agents into the party.

5. Campaign to teach the nation's 15 million national-minded peasants the benefits of socialism and Polish ties with the Russian Communist Party and government.

6. Increase cooperation between workers, peasants and the intelligentsia.

7. Eliminate bureaucracy and increase the efficiency of party management.

8. Permit free flow of self-criticism by party leaders to prevent recurrence of past mistakes.

Bonus Too Small, French Say

Paris, Sept. 6 (NYHT).—Premier Robert Schuman, who ended France's governmental crisis early Sunday morning when he succeeded in forming a cabinet that includes members of the Socialist Party, ran into quick opposition today.

The country's labor federations expressed prompt dissatisfaction with the first step that was taken to solve the unhappy problem of wages and prices. The cost-of-living bonus of 2500 francs (about $8) to every worker except civil servants and farm laborers was considered too low to compensate for recent increases in food prices.

The government tonight extended its decision to include civil servants as well.

A solution to the country's wage-price spiral, however, cannot be found by mere decrees that increase wages, as was recognized at the second cabinet meeting this afternoon whe nthe price of bread was increased from 24 fracs (about 8 cents) a kilo (2.2 pounds) to 35 francs (about 12 cents) as of September 15.

The bread increase became necessary when the government agreed several weeks ago to give farmers more for their wheat, once the cost of wheat went up, the government faced a daily deficit of 150,000,000 francs ($500,000).

House Spy Probers Eye Belgian Congo

'Political Football'

Clark Lays Incursion of Reds to GOP

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Attorney General Tom Clark accused the Republicans today of hypocrisy in their current "howling" against Communists.

Clark told a Labor Day rally here that J. V. Peters and a number of other alleged high-ranking Communists entered this country during Republican Administrations. He charged that the Republican Congress refused to give the Administration powers needed to control them.

Clark said he asked Congress last February for amendments to existing laws and for an "entirely new statute" to permit him to keep undesirable aliens in jail pending receipt of travel papers from the countries to which they were being deported. He said Congress refused.

Congress also took "four long months" to appropriate money for the Loyalty Review Board set up by President Truman in 1947, Clark said. He charged the Republicans were "not interested" in throwing Communists out of the Government because it was not an election year.

"They wanted to keep it for a political football," Clark said.

He said his duties included protecting the innocent as well as prosecuting the guilty and "neither I nor any other official of our Government has any right or inclination to imprison or to penalize anyone merely because of his political beliefs or deprive him of any full opportunity to defend himself."

By The Associated Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee is tracking down a report that an international group of scentists plan to star gaze from the middle of the Belgian Congo uranium fields.

Representative McDowell (R., Pa.) told reporters:

"If the report is true, we want to know why they picked that particular spot for an international astronomical laboratory. In the very same region there are more workable deposits of uranium than any place in the world."

The committee is particularly interested because:

1. Uranium is an atom bomb ingredient.

2. The committee's spy hearings are supposed to swerve soon in the direction of finding out whether Russia ran an atomic spy ring in this country.

McDowell said Belgium, the Netherlands and France—but not Russia—are reported to be backing the proposed new laboratory.

He said he had run across an obscure item in a newspaper reporting that nine million dollars had been provided for establishing an observatory in the highlands of the eastern Congo. He said he has asked a committee investigator to find out the source of the money and all other details.

The committee is slated to resume its spy hearings September 15.

Today a subcommittee goes into another week of preliminary work behind closed doors.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) has said the inquiry will lead to a third espionage network that operated with the help of people in the Government. The committee has hinted that atomic secrets were involved.

D. C. Sergeant Gets Medal for Bravery In Berlin Fete

A Washington soldier in Berlin, Sergt. Saint P. Whitmire, 28, of 5501 Grant st. ne., is recipient of the Army's Soldier's Medal for risking his life to save personnel in a flaming half-track towing ammunition.

According to the Public Relations Office of the Berlin Military Post, United States Army, Whitmire, then a member of the Twelfth Armored Division, drove his half-track to the one in flames, disengaged the ammunition trailer and hauled it out of danger. By his action, the Army said, the soldier saved the lives of his comrades and valuable Government property.

In the ceremonies in Berlin Whitmire also recieved the Bronze Star for meritorious conduct during World War II. His wife, Virginia, and three children live at the Grant st. ne. address. He is now a member of the Infantry Honor Guard Platoon in Berlin.

Loyalty Probe Hit as 'Smear'

ble of resignations from atomic energy projects since the end of the war until at the present time there remain less than 15 of the former 150 top-notch American scientists engaged in various Government atomic energy programs. A substantial number of these resignations, they said, were directly due to the methods of the House Un-American Activities Committee. "We can expect," added the scientists, "that the tactics of the Un-American Committee, if they continue as in the past, will make the situation even more acute."

"We do not deny the possible need for investigations such as are being carried out by the committee," the group argued, "but the fact remains that, in spite of its best intentions, the committee is creating an atmosphere that makes men shun Government work, thereby threatening us all."

May Ruin Them for Life

Many of the younger men have withdrawn from atomic energy work for the Government, said the group, "because they have found it increasingly difficult to reconcile themselves to Government employment on secret projects where they are looked upon by groups such as the Un-American Activities Committee as men not to be trusted, where they must subject themselves to the possibility of irresponsible smears that may ruin them professionally for life."

"It is not our desire," said the group, "to underestimate the possible damage that could be done to the United States by espionage agents of potential enemy nations. We recognize the likelihood that such agents may be operating in this country. We further believe that proper steps should be taken through responsible agencies of our Government in order to minimize the effectiveness of espionage activities."

Condon Attack Cited

The committee, however, they added, "has created a situation within which it is becoming increasingly difficult for scientists and engineers to function." The attack on Dr. Edward U. Condon, earlier this year, they said, was a "climax," and "was so repugnant to scientists that it will be years before the damage can be undone."

The group said that the Atomic Energy Commission was "in no way to blame for the situation" and that the commission "has been needlessly hampered because atomic energy has unfortunately become a political football."

The scientists asked President Truman and Governor Dewey to investigate the situation "and then direct your powers in an attempt to secure a remedy."

The signatures to the telegrams included Dr. Harrison Brown, associate professor at Institute for nuclear studies, University of Chicago; Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. Thorfin R. Hogness, director of the Institute of Radiobiology and biophysics, University of Chicago; Dr. Charles C. Lauritsen, professor of physics at California Institute of Technology;

Atom Bombs Would Have Devastated South England, Mock War Reveals

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The heart of Britain would be a shambles today if the planes that "hit" their targets during the four-day mock air war had been carrying atomic bombs.

The successful "raids" by big bombers from the mythical aggressor "Southland" proved to Britain that hope for existence is slim if an atomic war should come.

Theoretically, the southern counties of England—the heart of this island and of its empire—lie in almost unprecedented devastation. London, where one fifth of all the people in the British Isles live and work, is a horrifying mass of wreckage—also in theory.

The rules of the joint British-American air war games did not stipulate Southland's armaments, so the extent of the "damage" depends on whether the attacker imagined it was using atomic bombs while actually using cameras.

The rules of the mock war did specify, however, that Southland was a nenemy continental power occupying the western shores of Europe from Norway to France.

Washington women are "BANK-WISE"

More women earn their living in Washington—in proportion to total population—than in any other city in the land. In general, these women take care of their own financial affairs—and have acquired a "Bank Wisdom" far above the average.

Many women have found at the Union Trust the type of friendly assistance they demand. Statistically speaking, about half of our depositors are women.

They tell us they like the convenience of our two offices in the heart of the shopping district—the absence of red tape in our procedure—the efficiency of our service. They say they like the friendliness they find here most of all.

Murray Says Labor Faces 'Destruction'

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray said today the labor movement in this country "is burdened with legal shackles . . . that threaten its eventual destruction."

Murray spoke out against the Taft-Hartley labor law and the Eightieth Congress generally in a Labor Day speech prepared for a Nation-wide radio talk over the CBS network.

Union's Growth Traced

He traced the country's and labor unions' growth since the first Labor Day 66 years ago and summed up:

"No other nation has gone so far in such a short time. No other nation has provided so many good things for so many people. . . . But we, as a nation, have often placed too much emphasis on property rights and too little emphasis on human rights."

Murray said that monopolists controlled the Eightieth Congress, and added:

"This is the Congress which attempted to cut the heart out of the labor movement by passing a legalistic monstrosity called the Taft-Hartley law. This is the law that tipped the scales strongly in favor of management and is imposing 'government by injunction' upon the Nation's workers."

Program Outlined

In saying that the country has not gone far enough, Murray said:

"We have the right and duty to go to the ballot boxes next November 2. We must vote into office men and women who will seek to make the American dream of peace, prosperity and equality come true.

"We must stamp out segregation and other forms of discrimination. We can remove the voting limitations imposed by the poll tax. We can give real meaning to the civil rights provisions written into our Constitution.

"We have the power to curb inflation, to solve our vexing housing problem, to provide all our people with decent medical and educational services."

Big Business Robbing Workers, Says Green

Akron, Ohio, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—AFL President William Green said today that the policies of the Republican-controled Congress and leaders of big business "have robbed many millions of workers of the means to provide what they need for themselves and their families."

In a Labor Day speech before a mass meeting at Summit Park, Green said the high cost of living is the "major problem" facing labor and the country.

Voluntary Program Urged

He urged the Government to summon into conferences representatives of labor, industry and agriculture so that a "voluntary program" might be worked out to "protect the economic security of our country."

He said the first step would have to be a "halt to all price increases and a gradual reduction in prices."

Green said big business has "played right into the hands of the Communists."

Taft-Hartley Act Hit

"The free enterprise system has proved in the past to be far superior to any other . . . But free enterprise must operate for the benefit of all the people, not only a favored few at the top," he said.

"In my judgment, the workers of America will never accept communism unless they are driven to desperation by an economic squeeze and the repression of their basic freedoms."

Green said the beginning of the "economic squeeze" is inflation and the beginning of the curb on basic freedoms is the Taft-Hartley Act.

"Big business in America has cut the ground out from under us," he said. "And the policies instituted by the Eightieth Congress are sapping the strength of America and the American people.

"Those policies must be reversed."

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin told the gathering the Taft-Hartley law had promoted "needless litigation."

Employers and employes, he asserted, "have been driven to bootlegged agreements, both written and unwritten, in order to continue labor-management practices which were legal since the days of the Knights of Labor and now are illegal under the Taft-Hartley law."

Tobin said the recent session of Congress had sought to cripple the Labor Department by reduction of funds and eventually kill its cabinet status.

bringing in food and other vital products, might be throttled further or choked off altogether.

In New York City itself, where the 10,000 members of the AFL Teamsters Local No. 807 quit last Wednesday, many sections already had felt the effect of the tieup.

Food stocks in many grocery stores were growing scantier. Milk deliveries were imperiled by a scarcity of milk containers.

A halt in all types of construction, because of virtually exhausted building materials, was predicted by the end of this week.

The strike began when the New York local, the city's largest, walked off the job after rejecting a proposed contract calling for a 15-cent hourly wage increase.

The strikers countered with "rock-bottom" demands for a 25-cent increase. Operators indicated they would turn this down when negotiations resume tomorrow.

The New Jersey teamsters, members of Newark's local No. 478, voted to join the walkout yesterday after operators had rejected their proposals for a new contract.

The propsed terms specified a 15-cent increase, plus anything above that figure the striking New York local might win.

Under the old contract, wages for a 40-hour week ranged from $53.90 for helpers to a top of $71.40 for trailer-truck drivers.

Gas, Oil Becoming Short in Far West

San Francisco, Sept. 6 (AP).—Far Western States were rapidly depleting gasoline and fuel oil supplies today, with no predictable end in sight to the CIO oil workers strike. There arose the danger of huge crop losses if the motor transprotation system is crippled.

Holiday drivers, buzzing down the highways, were a critical problem and oil companies were urging prompt resort to voluntary rationing so that available fuel oils could be allocated to where they are most vitally needed.

There was a run on gasoline stations throughout the West, private automobile owners rushing to fill their tanks and, in many instances, buying extra gasoline for home storage cans.

Gov. Earl Warren, concerned over California's rich fruit and vegetable crops, ordered the public utility commission to "spare no time or expense" in determining the exact situation.

Oil companies said fuel supplies, at best, could last no longer than two weeks in California, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona. There will be "spot shortages" much sooner, particularly in smaller communities supplied by tank truck.

Nine major companies were struck at midnight last Friday by approximately 16,000 workers demanding higher pay.

Oil companies said they would ask Secretary of the Interior Krug to establish voluntary rationing.

The CIO union demanded a 21 cents an hour wage increase, to $1.89 per hour. The nine companies offered 12½ cents increase.

Truck Driver Killed

West Friendship, Md., Sept. 6 (AP).—Lewis Edward Barnes, 22, of Vicksburg, Carroll County, was killed yesterday when a truck he was driving crashed into a utility pole near here.

Partial Text of Byrnes Talk to American Bar Association

Ex-Secretary Urges Study to Improve Soviet Relations

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 6.—Here is a partial text of former Secretary James F. Byrnes' speech to the American Bar Association.

DURING and shortly after the war the vast majority of the American people were not aware of the deep cleavage in viewpoints and the marked absence of common standards of right and wrong between the Soviet leaders and ourselves. Today the situation has changed and the real danger is that we waste too much energy telling ourselves how right we are and how wrong the Soviet leaders are, and we may give too little thought to what we can do to improve the serious situation confronting us.

To keep our perspective it is as important to avoid falling victim to the belief that war is inevitable as it is to avoid succumbing to the perilous notion that peace can be had for the asking. The issue of war or peace is not wholly within our power to determine, but the issue will be affected by what we do or what we refrain from doing.

Despite their denials, there is little doubt that the Soviet leaders believe that there is an inherent conflict between the Communist and non-Communist world. Communist ideology, superimposed on land-locked Russian nationalism seeking outlets in warm waters, has accentuated expansionist tendencies.

But the Soviet leaders are realists. They are not likely to go to war unless they feel they can win or unless they believe they must fight for survival. While Soviet leaders fear war and probably would not consciously precipitate one, they are not likely to miss any opportunity of adding to their strength and position if they think they can do so without war. This was proved by the events in Czecholsovakia last spring.

History shows this diversified world has never been held enthralled by any one ideology. Ideologies militantly conflicting and logically irreconcilable, will choose the right to survive on the basis of mutual tolerance, in preference to the right to die on the basis of mutual extinction . . .

IT IS true that the greatest danger in the world today is the danger of continued aggression on the part of the Soviet Union. We are united in our opposition to such aggression. But it does not help us to move toward a more peaceful world to speak or act in terms that might help give the false impression that we are only concerned with an all-out power struggle with Soviet Russia . . .

James F. Byrnes

The Western powers did not find it easy to deal with Russia before the Soviet revolution, and my experience convinces me that dealings with them are not likely to be easy for many years to come. But that is no reason for not continuing to try to deal with them. Too much is at stake not patiently to test out every reasonable opportunity of improving our relationships.

As long as men confer about their problems, even if their language is profane, there is always hope of agreement. But if one of the negotiators stops talking and his face turns white, the other man had better prepare to fight.

There are some who assert that in the months following the cessation of hostilities in 1945, we were too eager to reach agreements with the Soviets. I disagree. Then, as now, the people of the world wanted peace. At that time, as a result of our common war effort against the Nazis and the terrific casualties of the Red army, the Soviets had in this country a tremendous deposit of good will. They recklessly squandered that deposit. But at first our people were loath to believe official reports of Russian demands, and their violations of agreements, and had we not patiently exhausted every effort to maintain harmonious relations with them we would not now have in this country the unity that exists as to our relations with the Soviets.

WHILE experience reveals that at times differences are such that no agreement is more conducive to peace than is an agreement, some of our people have the mistaken idea that no adjustment has been made or can be made with the Russians that is not a surrender. That is a dangerous idea . . .

There is a middle ground between drifting into war and drifting into appeasement. And our efforts should be directed now, and over the years, to building up that middle ground where men of good will of all nations can seek peace on the basis of mutual tolerance and understanding.

To support the argument that any agreement with the Soviets will be appeasement, it is charged that we were hornswoggled and overreached in nearly every agreement President Roosevelt made with the Soviet Union during the war. As I was not Secretary of State at that time, I am under no compulsion to defend them. Undoubtedly the agreements were not perfect. But it is a grotesque distortion to picture these agreements on our part as the naive action of President Roosevelt trying to play the part of Santa Claus.

The reservoir of good will for America which President Roosevelt built up throughout the world is one of America's precious assets in the world today. We should not destroy that precious asset.

Most of the agreements grew out of the military situation and most of them were based on the exigencies as they appeared to hard-headed military men. Nearly every agreement was made in concert with Prime Minister Churchill and his experienced advisers.

It is true that emotionally our feelings toward the Soviet leaders were somewhat different when their people were bearing the brunt of the Nazi attacks from what they are now. But it is not true that those in high places, in America and Britain, were unaware of deep-seated differences in attitudes and of uncomfortable suspicions stemming therefrom.

UNTIL the final weeks of the war when the collapse of Nazi power became evident, our fear as well as the Soviet fear, was not that we or they might push our armies too far forward. The fear was that we or they might not exploit to the fuit our military might, each preferring to leave to the other a disproportionate share of the fighting. We constantly feared that the Soviet offensives were being slowed up for other than logistic reasons, and they entertained suspicions regarding our offensives. Now we both know these suspicions were unfounded.

Some who were discreetly silent in the critical days of the war when it was customary to rush partially trained young boys to Europe as replacements, are now asserting that our armies should have advanced and occupied Berlin and Prague before the Russians did.

The zones of military occupation in Germany were worked out primarily by our military advisers with the British in the summer of 1943. Early in 1944, the European Advisory Commission, with the assistance of military advisers, worked on the zonal agreement, but reached no final decision. At Quebec in September, 1944, President Roosevelt agreed to accept the southwest zone when Mr. Churchill agreed that Bremerhaven should be made a part of the American zone to insure us the use of a major port.

At Yalta it was agreed that France should be invited to take over a zone, the area to be agreed upon by the European Advisory Commission. That necessitated a change in the zonal agreement and a revised agreement containing the provisions for the government of Berlin was signed by the representatives of the European Advisory Commission in May and was announced by the four military commanders in Berlin on June 5, 1945. The original agreement prescribed the territory to be occupied by our army.

We were not competing with the Soviets to see which one could take the most territory or suffer the most casualties. At the time of that agreement no one of our military chiefs had any idea we would reach Berlin before the Soviets did. Later, when our troops withdrew to our zone, we were simply complying with our agreement.

WHILE possibly our representatives, civilian and military, should have spelled out in more details our right of access to Berlin, it is not true that our present difficulties in Berlin are due to the fact that our rights were not more meticulously defined.

The Soviets do not claim that we were not granted the right of access to Berlin. Their claim is that the situation which has been created in Berlin has arisen as a result of the violation by the Western powers "of agreed decisions taken by the four powers in regard to Germany and Berlin, which violation has found its expression in the carrying out of a separate currency reform, in the introduction of a special currency for the western sectors of Berlin and in the policy of dismemberment of Germany."

I do not agree with the Soviet claim, but the record shows that a more detailed definition of our right of access to Berlin would not have deterred them from their course in Berlin.

When even Mr. Molotov does not base Soviet action upon the absence of a more specific agreement as to the right of access to Berlin, no American should use that argument to justify Soviet action.

The decision regarding Prague appears to have been exclusively a military decision. As the combined Allied armies advanced on Germany it was generally assumed that Prague would be reached first by the Russians. But we underestimated the prowess of General Patton. When it appeared that our troops were in a position to advance from Pilsen to Prague, General Eisenhower informed Moscow that our troops would move forward if the situation required it. The chief of the Soviet general staff replied requesting that our forces should not advance beyond the Rudejovice, Pilsen, Karlsbad line. The request was complied with to avoid collisions between American forces from the west and Soviet forces from the east.

SIMILARLY the Yalta agreements must be appraised in the context of the circumstances under which they were made. For example, there was the agreement regarding Poland. It was not a question of what we would let the Russians do, but what we could get the Russians to do . . .

Perhaps the Yalta agreement that has been subjected to the most serious criticism is that relating to the Far East. It was agreed that in return for Soviet participation in the war against Japan "the former rights of Russia violated by the treacherous attack of 1904 shall be restored." These were listed as the return of the southern half of Sakhalin Island, the internationalization of the Port of Dairen, the lease of Port Arthur as a Russian naval base and joint Russo-Chinese operation of the Chinese Eastern and South Manchurian railroads. We agreed to the acquisition by the Soviets of the Kurile Islands. We also agreed to use our influence to have China agree to that part affecting Chinese territory.

China was entirely willing to agree to these Russian claims. When China's representative met Mr. Molotov in Moscow in July, 1945—I was then Secretary of State—I was advised that the Soviets had made additional claims as a condition of their entering the war with Japan. I advised the Chinese government that the United States was not supporting any additional claims on China by the Soviets.

To be fair in passing upon the wisdom of these agreements, we must consider the circumstances as they were appraised by our military advisers at the time and not the circumstances as they developed after the Nazi collapse.

IN THE pursuit of their expansion policies in Eastern Europe, the Soviets found these war agreements such obstacles in the way of their plans that they had to violate nearly all of the agreements. The violations have constituted the basis of the stream of protests sent to Moscow by the Western powers. If the agreements were such concessions or gifts by Churchill and Roosevelt to the Soviets, it is rather peculiar that the Soviets had to violate them.

It is true that prior to the Yalta conference, the Soviet Union had indicated its intention to enter the war against Japan, but it had not disclosed what it would expect or demand at the Peace Conference.

The Yalta Conference occurred only six weeks after the Germans had launched the Battle of the Bulge. We had not yet crossed the Rhine. No one knew how long the European war would last or what toll in casualties it would exact.

It was not yet known whether an atomic bomb could be produced. Our Marines had not yet landed on Iwo Jima. Our military leaders were preparing for an invasion of Japan in November, 1945. It was their opinion, on which statesmen had to rely, that in such an invasion we would suffer one million casualties.

Our military advisers did not discuss getting the Soviets in the war. They knew the Soviets would enter and the only question was when they would enter. We were not interested in the Soviets entering after the date set for our invasion. We wanted them to enter in time to share the losses certain to result from our invasion.

Had an invasion of Japan been necessary and had the war with Japan continued for six months, it is probable that the Soviet Union would have been in practical possession of virtually all the territory accorded to it under the Yalta agreement. Had those military contingencies occurred and had there been no agreement, it is almost certain that the Soviet Union would have claimed greater rights than those promised her.

JUST suppose Churchill and Roosevelt had announced at Yalta, while the Red army was advancing on Berlin, that they were opposed to the Soviets entering the war; that we would willingly suffer a million casualties rather than let the Soviets recover one foot of territory from Japan or let China transfer a foot of territory to the Soviets. What would have been the response of Americans—especially the fathers and mothers of America?

And assuming we did not want the Soviets in the Japanese war, who thinks we could have kept them out? They had an old score to settle with the Japanese and they wanted to settle it while Japan was being attacked by the Allied nations.

Had the Soviets entered the war without an agreement that MacArthur should be Supreme Commander, would we not have had in Japan some of the problems we have had in Europe?

When the Japanese finally surrendered, our military advisers were seriously troubled by the problem of disarming the Japanese and they suggested the territories within which the respective allies should receive the surrender of the Japanese. This military decision left the Soviet troops in temporary occupation of Manchuria and part of Korea. They withdrew from Manchuria, but they are still in Korea.

Churchill and Roosevelt had to rely on their military advisers. Those advisers based their recommendations an existing conditions and on their foresight. Today the critics base their criticisms on their hindsight.

A realistic conclusion is that the war agreements gave the Soviet Union very little that they were not in a position to take without agreement. Today Soviet control does not extend beyond the lines its armies occupied except one area in Europe, where our Army had to

Bar Urged to Act On Communism

Seattle, Sept. 6 (AP).—The resolutions committee of the American Bar Association Convention here received several proposals today denouncing Communism.

Max Chopnick of New York presented a resolution for a special committee on measures to combat Communism.

Edwin M. Ottenbourg of New York proposed that any attorney "publicly or secretly" aiding the Communist movement should be barred from the bar association.

Robert B. Bolger of Philadelphia suggested that the ABA start a campaign to educate citizens on the principles of the bill of rights.

A controversy over public housing support was brought to light when Horace Russell of Chicago introduced a resolution asking that the management of the American Bar Association Journal be told to stop supporting the "public housing lobby."

Russell's resolution recited editorial support which he said the journal had given to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill.

Nine lawyers were nominated for the Association's house of delegates. Five will be elected. The nominees are Alfred J. Schweppe, Seattle, former dean of the University of Washington Law School; Charles E. Lane, Wyoming; John Kirkland Clark, New York; Frederick M. Miller, Iowa; Julian Skinner, Alabama; Dean C. Davis, Vermont; Charles M. Lyman, Connecticut; A. W. Boyns, Arkansas and R. G. Storey, Texas.

fluence Soviet leaders to change their present policies.

Looking ahead to a possible new meeting of the Foreign Ministers on Germany, Byrnes thought it was an American as well as Soviet interest to remove all occupation troops from Germany, except for a small security force, as soon as a "satisfactory" German government is established. He suggested three conditions for a German peace treaty, as follows:

(1) To leave Germany free to develop peace-time industries, but to keep her demilitarized for at least a generation;

2. To let the Ruhr industries be supervised by Germany's immediate neighbors, with both the United States and Russia excluded from control; and

3. To let Russia have reparations from current German production as compensation for the factories originally assigned to Russia, but later kept in Germany.

Pleads for Bipartisan Policy

Earlier in his speech Byrnes pleaded for maintenance of the present bipartisan foreign policy, with leaders of the party out of power being informed "before policies are determined and not after they are announced."

He said the present policy was opposed by "the naive Mr. Wallace" and by the Communists, but was supported by the overwhelming majority of the American people. And he paid a warm tribute to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), saying the bipartisan policy was achieved only because of "his intelligent and patriotic cooperation."

withdraw to the line of the territory we had previously agreed upon as our zone. And as a result of the Tehren agreement, they were forced to withdraw their army from Iran.

THE war agreements made while the fortunes of war were still hanging in the balance undoubtedly contributed to reduce tension among the Allies and to avoid frictions which might have prolonged and conceivably might have affected the outcome of the war.

The war agreements also helped to make possible the establishment of the United Nations. It has been subjected to severe tests. I admit its prestige has been somewhat impaired but I firmly believe if it is given a chance to live and grow, it will yet prove to be one of the greatest achievements in human history.

Because the struggle for peace is difficult is no reason for giving up the strggle. We can be forgiven if we strive for peace and fail. We will not be forgiven if we cease to strive.

There are those who say that because of the Soviet attitude, it has now become obvious that we cannot build one world and that we must have two worlds. For this pessimistic view I must confess there is some justification. But I do not abandon hope. Before this we have seen governments change policies. What goes on behind the Iron Curtain, we do not know. But there is great unrest in eastern Europe. We can be certain the people of Russia, like the people of the United States, do not want war. And we must hope that the natural longing of the Russian people for peace and for the opportunity to improve their standard of living may yet influence the Soviet leaders to change their policies . . .

The Soviet Union refused to join in the Marshall Plan. Yet trade between the Soviet Union and the nations participating in that plan will not only help to make the plan succeed but will be of great economic benefit to the Soviet Union. Certainly we should not make the mistake which the Soviet Union has made of jumping to the conclusion that anything which is good for one is bad for the other.

It is also in the interest of both ourselves and the Soviet Union that we renew our efforts to agree upon a German treaty. As I stated in Stuttgart in the fall of 1946, it is not in our interest or the Soviet interest that Germany should become a pawn or a partner in a struggle for power between the East and the West.

It is very much in our interest and in the Soviet interest that Germany, while free to develop her peacetime industries, should be demilitarized and kept demilitarized for at least a generation.

We have rightly pledged ourselves not to remove our troops from Germany until all allied troops are removed, but it is in our interest and in the Soviet interest to agree that when a satisfactory German government is established we will promptly remove all occupation troops from Germany and leave only a small security force to see that Germany stays demilitarized.

For many reasons demilitarization is important. The people of France and many Americans fear that when government in Germany is restored to the German people, there will follow in Germany the infiltration methods used by the Soviets in other countries. They fear the Iron Curtain will be extended to the Rhine and behind that curtain Germany will be rearmed. On the other hand, the Soviets fear that the Western Powers will influence Germany to be unfriendly to the Soviet Union and permit German rearmament.

THIS mutual distrust makes all the more necessary the adoption of the treaty we offered to keep Germany disarmed for 40 years. The treaty would provide machinery to enforce the disarmament. Eastern and western powers will have less fear of a disarmed Germany.

We must restore to the German people the management of their own affairs, subject only to those minimum safeguards necessary to ensure that Germany stays disarmed, observes basic human rights and permits the great resources of the Ruhr to be administered in the interest of the peace and welfare of Europe as a whole, including Germany.

In the administration of these safeguards no one Allied power should have the right of veto or domination. The supervision of the Ruhr might be left to Germany's immediate neighbors, with both ourselves and the Soviets excluded.

The Soviets should not be given greater reparations than they accepted at Potsdam. However, there is a reasonable basis of compromise in the suggestion made by the United States delegation at the Moscow meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers in 1947, that reparations from current production might be allowed as compensation for the reduction in the plants and equipment which were to be transferred to the Soviets, which reduction was made necessary because of the increase in the level of industry.

IT IS our task while keeping strong and resisting aggression, to do what we can to restore conditions of peace where we can and when we can.

Today the great difficulty is that the nations of the world are so haunted by the fear of war that they are thinking too much about what would happen in the event of war and too little about what would help them to live together in peace.

We cannot change this unhealthy and dangerous state of mind overnight. But the more we can do to restore economic health and normal peaceful living, the sooner will nations recover from their obsession about war and the more will they become concerned to maintain the peace.

Let us prove in the Court of World Opinion that America can be realistic and yet tolerant, firm and yet patient. Let us not give up the hope of maintaining peace before the world has even returned to peace.

Bible Group Keeps Officers

Westminister, Md., Sept. 6 (AP).—The Organized Bible Class Association of Washington, D. C., reelected most of its officers today at the business session of its twenty-seventh annual conference at Western Maryland College.

Page McK. Etchison was renamed to the presidency and the only new name among the executive officers was that of Miss Alberta Cissel, elected assistant treasurer.

The others include Howard M. Stackhouse, executive vice president; George A, Watson, treasurer; Miss Laura Lindley, conference reporter, and Mrs. Gertrude M. Donovan, conference reports reporter.

They were installed immediately after the election by the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church.

Mrs. Daisy Bell and George E. Harris were named vice presidents at large. Clarence E. Cook of Baltimore was named honorary vice president.

Each of the denominational groups represented among the 479 Washingtonians who are registered delegates elected a panel of vice presidents.

2 Criminals Kill Detective, Kidnap Assistant Chief

New Orleans, Sept. 6, (U.P.).—Two criminals being returned from the Mississippi Gulf Coast today killed a New Orleans detective, then kidnaped the assistant chief of detectives and fled with him in his own automobile.

The slain detective was Nick Jacobs, 40. The assistant chief of detectives was later released by the desperadoes, 60 miles north of New Orleans. His name is John Jackson.

Jacobs and another detective were bringing back the two men from the coast. On the eastern side of New Orleans, one of the men grabbed Jacobs' gun and killed him. The other detective fled.

Then the two criminals stopped a passing motorist and ordered him to drive them to town. The motorist drove them straight into the basement of the Criminal Courts building, jumped out of his automobile and fled. They stopped Assistant Chief of Detectives Jackson, who was leaving the basement in his automobile, and fled in Jackson's car.

Americans Alive

As this is written, complete figures on the Labor Day weekend accident toll have not yet been compiled. Nevertheless, it seems likely that the tally will be materially below the record of previous holidays. Yesterday afternoon the total deaths stood at 247, with 183 of those resulting from traffic accidents. The Washington vicinity also has been fortunate in a low death rate over the weekend. Several scores of Americans are alive this year who, if previous performance had been repeated, would have died in tangled piles of wreckage.

Holiday drownings, a secondary cause of death, seem to defy most precautionary advices. But on the highways, at least, Americans seem to be realizing that driving is just as pleasant, indeed, considerably more so, if they don't whiz through the country-side at 80 miles an hour. Or perhaps it's merely that the grisly reports of Labor Day fatalities from the past have so impressed people that they drive with more caution when they venture away from home on holidays. Anyhow, the result is encouraging. We should like to see the same efforts which have been made against excessive speed directed against the aimless amblers, the wrong-side-of-the-roaders and the others with no business driving cars who contribute to highway hazards. There is no cause for relaxation until that calloused phrase, "normal accident toll," is banished from the language.

Feng Yu-hsiang

Feng Yu-hsiang was on his way to join the Nanking dissidents—who, now exiled mainly in Hongkong, are about to assemble in North China—when he was burned to death in a Soviet ship outside Odessa. What prestige he would have had in this Third Force, called the Democratic League, is problematical. The general had little force of character in a country which is woefully short of leadership, and owed any standing he had mainly to seniority, always influential in China, and partly to the various military commands he had held which are now dispersed in the Kuomintang and Communist armies.

Strongly opposed to civil war, Feng affiliated with the anti-Chiang movement because of his feeling that a Popular Front was the only solvent of China's difficulties. He wanted a convention of the two sides to see whether a coalition government was possible, with the Democratic League supplying the cement. Without it he felt that the future held nothing for China but endless and inconclusive strife. Till President Truman denied it, such a solution was favored by Secretary Marshall himself, though that was before any dealings with the Communists were regarded as fellow-traveling. Feng insisted that the wise course for America was impartiality, and he had declared that he intended to stop off at Moscow in order to get impartiality from the Kremlin.

The "Christian General," as he was widely known, was a product of the Tuchun (warlord) China which kept the country in turmoil between the Republican Revolution in 1911 and the Nationalist or Kuomintang Revolution of 1927. Of a coolie family, he took up soldiering, and rose rapidly in command. In 1924 he turned on his chief, marching back to Peking, where he took charge of the Chinese government. It was an act of treachery that the Chinese people found hard to forgive, even though they were sick of the warfare that Feng declared he wished to terminate. In his turn he was ousted. He eventually joined forces with the Kuomintang under Chiang Kai-shek. He had been a member of the Kuomintang since 1918, whether because of sympathy with its ideals or on the insurance principle, it is impossible to say. At any rate, Chiang welcomed an alliance with Feng and his Kuominchun, or Nationalist Army. At this time the Kuomintang and the Communists were in partnership, and Feng (who, like Chiang, had had a spell of indoctrination in Moscow) worked with Chiang and the Communists. Feng became vice generalissimo under Chiang, and kept the position, in spite of intermittent breaks with Chiang, till recently. On his last break 18 months ago, caused by Feng's refusal to join Chiang Kai-shek in his armed clash with the Communists, Feng was sent to America on a mission of inquiry, though the intent was to get rid of him. In America he was so outspoken in his criticism of Chiang Kai-shek that the generalissimo relieved him of his vice generalissimoship.

Even before his campaign in America against Chiang Kai-shek (and American aid to China), Feng was the most publicized of the Chinese warlords, particularly in missionary circles, where his conversion to Methodism caused a great stir in the '20s. A legend grew up that he used to baptize his troops with a hose. The fact is that he became a great proselytizer, and sought to instill into his troops the same spartan living and personal uprightness that Cromwell inspired. But he was much more the intriguer than the fighter, though intrigue was the prevailing morality of his times. He had a spectacular build in height and weight, and, if he had any virtue, it was in his simple living and frugal, even miserly, habits, as well as his veneration for the Chinese classics, of which he imbibed a comprehensive knowledge. In these respects he was a contrast to all his fellow warriors, except his old chief, Wu Pei-fu. But in no other period in Chinese history would he have attained any eminence.

Disorder In Society

There was something highly unrealistic in the original draft of the resolution of the World Council of Churches at Amsterdam (published in full in Friday's issue of The Washington Post) rejecting the "ideologies of both communism and capitalism." Both ideologies are academic in terms of the text of the resolution, "The Church and the Disorder of Society." No country is practicing communism, none is practicing capitalism, and in trying to make any antithesis of the sort, the church draftsmen were indulging in semantic nonsense. Charles P. Taft brought them closer to earth by obtaining consent to a change in the resolution to make it read that the churches condemned "communism and laissez faire (uncontrolled) capitalism," though even this emendation left the real struggle in our world undefined.

It is only in spiritual terms that the issue of the age can be described. Soviet Russia stands at the head of an aggressive movement which would make the state so supreme over the individual that the individual would be condemned to slavery. And even here there has been a metamorphosis in the "ideology". Nowadays the new statism is Soviet statism, as the struggle back of the iron curtain testifies, and Moscow is intent upon making not only Russians but also the people of the satellite countries Soviet Men. This is not only imperialism of the crassest variety, it is idolatry. The opposing movement is the insistence of the free world that the individual is master of his national state. It is only out of the sheer necessity of self-defense that the movement has become a countercrusade aimed at developing a unity among all such like-minded peoples.

To be sure, the churches have a lot to say about freedom, but in raising economic straw men to knock down, they give the impression that they wish to stay above the battle, instead of joining it. The effect is a tribute to Soviet propaganda. The villain of "laissez faire (uncontrolled)" is supposed to be the United States, just as the villain of communism is supposed to be Soviet Russia. This country is supposed to be the home of a self-seeking, grasping capitalism which keeps the workers ground down, and enables the rich to live in high luxury. The picture is ludicrous. Here is a tax system which shears the rich as does no other tax system except perhaps the British—a tax system, moreover, which is administered with justice and efficiency. This is only one method of "control" that is in American operation for the purpose of insuring a fair redistribution of the national product. It was one of Wendell Willkie's discoveries in Russia that the income inequalities in the Soviet Union would not be tolerated in the United States. This applies to every other country except Britain. If there is any doubt about the social effect of American redistributionism, let the churchmen look at the clothes worn by this nation's children, and try to pick out what stratum of society they come from. In no other country would the task be more difficult.

It is time that the Voice of America punctured the myth of what Sir Hartley Shawcross, Britain's Attorney General, some months ago called America's "unbridled capitalism". It should be easy to give the score. The controls in the American system are manifold and tight. To be sure, the United States doesn't seek to bridle incentive, and so kill the goose that lays the eggs; and a hungry world has reason to be grateful that it doesn't. But it lays as heavy a hand on the eggs as any state, ancient or modern. It keeps for the state many sectors of activity away from private ownership or hedges them about with controls in the public interest. And, as a practitioner of the welfare state, it has assumed the responsibility for the full employment of the national resources, so as to keep the economy on an even keel. Sumner H. Slichter, the Harvard economist, wonders, indeed, whether the American degree of redistributionism has not already changed the system into a "laboristic state." The churchmen ought to know whereof they speak before they embark on ex cathedra utterances about the disorder in world society.

Queen Juliana

The best compliment that could be paid to Queen Juliana is that she is a worthy daughter of a great Queen. Queen Wilhelmina (as she will always be called by the Dutch) managed to identify herself completely with the people of the Netherlands. When, in late 1939, they had to economize, she economized; when they had to husband their gas, she garaged her cars, and took to a bicycle. She typified the best characteristics of the Dutch, in her neatness, her simplicity, her integrity, and her industry. Withal she remained queenly, acting the part that came to her by inheritance with a zealous regard for the best traditions of the House of Orange and a scrupulous respect for the constitutional limitations of her august office. Testimony to her quality and her achievement was that in wartime exile she remained firmly fixed in Dutch affections. The Dutch knew that in her heart she was sharing in their ordeal, that she would rather have stayed in Holland, if her counselors had so permitted. Now, after a reign of exactly half a century, she is making way for her daughter, the 39-year-old Juliana, who is of the same spiritual as well as physical mold as her venerated mother.

The lot of a constitutional monarch is by no means an easy one. The responsibilities, to be sure, are not exacting, since policy-making belongs to the people's representatives, but the obligations of heading the state and furnishing a constant example to the people are onerous and burdensome. Fortunately Queen Juliana served an apprenticeship for her present role when she was Princess Regent. Thus her daily schedule, which keeps her busy from early morning till late at night, will not be much changed. She has already shown a rigorous sense of duty, and the Dutch people are looking forward to her reign with confidence. Juliana gives promise that she will live up to expectations. The graceful and loving reference to her mother, her gesture of dedication to the Netherlands nation—these words spoken at the abdication ceremony must have fallen gratefully on the Dutch ear. The investiture of Juliana, which took place yesterday, is the occasion for congratulations to the Dutch people; we wish them and her well, and felicitate them on the succession of a fine woman and an ardent patriot.

Seeing Spies

Senator Revercomb's answer to the recent report to the State Department quelling fears that the United Nations is being used as a shield for Communist spies in this country is that the report is a "whitewash." He indicates that the Senate Subcommittee investigating immigration, of which he is chairman, will make a full-fledged inquiry of its own. Accordingly he has called upon Secretary Marshall to give his committee access to official files about representatives of Soviet satellite states entering this country as United Nations employes.

This newspaper has not the slightest sympathy with any illegal activities conducted under the aegis of the United Nations. If it can be demonstrated that certain U. N. employes are actually subverting the interests of the United States, then they should be deported forthwith. But such action should be taken on the basis of provable fact rather than mere suspicion—and the report revealed the charges originally leveled by several State Department underlings to be founded primarily on suspicion. Furthermore, the committee appointed by Secretary Marshall concluded that adequate machinery now exists for protecting the country's interests in such matters.

There is no valid reason why the Revercomb committee should not have access to records which are legitimately its concern. However, it would be a great deal more reassuring if one could feel that the committee's probe would be made as the result of dispassionate inquiry rather than of bias tinged with politics. Senator Revercomb has again demonstrated what we observed of him the other day, that he has not the faintest conception of the responsibilities this country undertook toward the U. N. when the international organization was located in this country. Apparently he would impose on U. N. employes some sort of American loyalty test.

Doubtless the United Nations will withstand the affront to its integrity which Senator Revercomb has reiterated, though charges such as his embarrass relationships and give the Communists a convenient sounding board. But Mr. Revercomb's casual dismissal of the report of the inquiry made by three distinguished Americans as a "whitewash" is of more concern. In effect he impugns the objectivity of three disinterested citizens who, with no connection with the State Department and nothing to defend, made an exhaustive and painstaking analysis of the entire question. In other words, he has resorted to the totalitarian tactic of announcing his verdict before he has seen the evidence.

Diplomatic War

The "recall" of United States Vice Consul Donald F. Ewing from his post in Sofia at the request of the Bulgarian Government follows a pattern all too likely to become familiar in respect of the countries behind the iron curtain. Like Lieut. Robert Dreher, recently expelled from his post as Assistant United States Naval Attache in Moscow, Mr. Ewing was accused of "espionage activities." The Bulgarian authorities even took the trouble to arrange a melodramatic encounter between Mr. Ewing and a couple of Bulgarian "agents" who handed him "secret" documents by way of imparting to the affair what the late W. S. Gilbert termed "a bit of corroborative detail designed to lend artistic verisimilitude to an otherwise bald and unconvincing narrative." The more prosaic press officer of the State Department, Mr. Michael McDermott, appears disposed to call it merely another "frame-up."

It was Mr. Ewing's business in Sofia to lend such assistance as he could to visiting American businessmen, very few of whom were permitted to enter the country, and to obtain for his own country such meager information about commercial conditions in Bulgaria as an omnipresent secret police allowed to become available. He will almost certainly be happier and more useful in another post. If, as we hope, the United States actually has spies in Bulgaria, they operate, doubtless, more covertly than Mr. Ewing. One can explain this "scandal" about a consular official only in terms of its propaganda value for Bulgarian consumption. Police state authorities always like to foster the impression that they are guarding their country from dire external threats. The exposure of espionage affords an admirable pretext for repression of all personal liberty.

"Freedom For Heretics"

I have read your editorial of September 3 entitled "Freedom or Heretics" with great dismay. That an editor of a large newspaper could be so confused on the basic question of religious freedom astounds me.

Our constitution indeed guarantees that "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibit the free exercise thereof." Religion is the relationship between man and God. Atheism denies the existence of God and therefore any such relationship. Atheism then is not a religion at all.

Our Government is built on the belief in the existence of God and the formers of our Government put the question of God's existence out of the realm of controversy. We have also put beyond controversy the question of the moral wrongness of deliberate murder. Would you contend that our radio stations should give to "Murder, Inc.," the same free time they give to the police department in its efforts to protect human lives?

The type of freedom of religious worship which you seem to defend is the type that is guaranteed by the Soviet constitution, Article 124 of which reads: "Freedom of religious worship and freedom of anti-religious propaganda is recognized for all citizens." If such freedom were to be applied in America, it would mean that atheistic propagandists should be allowed to address the Congress each time that that body opens its proceedings with a chaplain's prayer. Such thinking is not worthy of the editorial columns of your newspaper.

Televised Battles

The future certainly holds some wonderful things in store for us. Atomic bombs, push-button warfare, and now I read in The Washington Post that it will be possible to televise entire battles. Admiral Jennings' statement that some day civilians might see actual battles was particularly gratifying.

What fun it will be, after washing the dishes and putting the kids to bed, to ask the Browns over for a drink and to see a battle.

"Not much doing in Indonesia tonight" one would say, "Let's try Jerusalem."

"Not enough action; what's the matter with these fellows, don't they know this set cost $500?"

"Let's switch to China, there is always something doing in China."

Of course, by the time the gadget is perfected the war might be a good deal closer than that. If an American women is really lucky, Admiral Jennings, she might even see her own husband die in action. Oh, the wonders of science!

Slipshod Style

Moved by Mr. Nachtrieb's spirited protest (September) about the use of "anent" in letters to the editor, I would like to come in on the second chorus and ask whether the constant dropping of the preposition "of" is now standard and accepted practice in American journalism.

Repeatedly I observe such phrases as "He threw it out the window," or "She fell out the car door," although I am glad to say that I have not seen them hitherto in The Washington Post. They strike me as intolerably slipshod and ugly, but maybe I am just old-fashioned.

My other main annoyance in contemporary American journalistic "style" is the wrong use of the past tense of the verb "to spit." In my book it should be "spat." But usually it seems to remain "spit", whether present or past is under discussion. i. e. "He came into the room and spit out the window." Rather careless, no? RENE MacCOLL.

"Exoneration"

I sincerely hope, that the report of the three-man committee appointed to investigate whether certain representatives of international organizations in this country constitutes a security threat, to which you refer in your editorial on September 3, "Exoneration," is fully justified.

I wish, however, to draw attention to the fact, that the same "subordinate officials of non-policy-making" division of the Department of State on other occasion showed more foresight in performance of their duties than the highest policy-making personalities.

In 1941, a certain Mr. Eisler was refused a visa to enter this country because of his subversive activities abroad. The visa division, which acted this time according to the law, was overruled, however, by the Undersecretary of State, who, according to the Congressional Record, decided on the advice of still higher policy-making authorities.

Mr. Eisler was admitted into the United States and for seven years was permitted to spread communistic ideologies here, as a highly paid member of the Hollywood movie industry. It took a great deal of effort and the taxpayers' money to deport him where he belongs, behind the iron curtain. His brother, Gerhart, is still in this country.

So far I can remember, early this spring, on the occasion of Eisler deportation, the visa division of the Department of State was highly commended by one of the congressional committees, and policy-making officials of the 1941 period badly criticized for the lack of foresight and dereliction of their duties.

Hiss And Chambers

Apropos a recent letter endowing with the highest motives the performances of such "reformed" characters as Whittaker Chambers, the integrity of these people might be less open to question, it seems to me, were it not for the curious fact or coincidence that they usually reform toward that side of the political arena which offers the greater personal benefits and lucrative inducements. Somehow they never reform to their financial detriment.

Moreover, it is not difficult to understand the willingness, nay, eagerness of the average person to pounce upon and revile Mr. Hiss. To hate comes easy. It does not require self-discipline or struggle to keep baser emotions under control. To suspend judgment, on the other hand, requires a real mental effort; a maturity of mind and spirit, a development to which most people have not as yet attained.

Historic Parallel

In 1895, Oscar Wilde, 39 years old, was doing all right for himself. Brilliant, witty, author of successful plays, he enjoyed a good income and a high place in his world. Then he brought suit for libel against the Marquis of Queensbury, who had made some remarks about his associations. When Sir Edward Carson, Queensbury's lawyer, got through with him on cross-examination, Wilde was a broken man—ruined, disgraced and on his way to jail. HISSTORY.

"Prefabricated Housing"

Mr. Herbert S. Colton's August 21 letter in refutation of my letter advocating industrialized housing, published August 16, maintains that because of "distribution costs," prefabrication's methods . . . "have so far failed in lowering costs as contrasted to more conventional methods of housing."

If we examine the euphemistic term "distribution costs," most unbiased minds will come to the same conclusion as that quoted from the "High Cost of Housing" report of the Joint Housing Committee, Eightieth Congress, dated January 12, 1948. "According to the Wall Street Journal, a great disappointment of prefabrication has been its failure consistently to undersell conventional structures. Labor groups, politicians and businessmen with an interest in the traditional way of doing things have seen to that."

Mr. Colton cites as "almost conclusive" evidence for his case against the writer's suggested methods, two prefabricated projects: the first an unnamed project "employing almost the identical engineering methods suggested" . . . "to build a project of 1000 homes, are now necessarily selling at a price no lower than competition"; secondly he cites the testimony of the President of the Kaiser-Burns Co. who "concluded prefabrication produces houses more quickly but at a slightly higher cost."

It would seem to me that a 1000-house project is hardly a fair test of whether a mechanized project will cut costs. Proper tooling for mass production techniques is a very expensive process which requires production of a large number of units to realize the enormous savings possible. It could be that a 1000-unit project cited by Mr. Colton was not large enough to amortize the original high jig and tooling costs and pass the critical point. As for the Kaiser organization, its forte generally has been that of speed in a sellers' market rather than economy.

The Engineering News-Record of July 29 carries an account of apartment construction by the Schroedel Construction Corp. of Milwaukee, using all welded steel frames, covered and floored with shop fabricated modular panels similar to those advocated by the writer, with reported costs of about 50 per cent of conventional masonry construction. A later edition, August 19, reports the Lustron Corp.'s 1000 square feet steel house as "selling completely erected for $8000 exclusive of land." "Reliance Homes, Inc., Philadelphia, sets a price to builders of $5500 job factory, or $6000 delivered, and erected in Philadelphia for a three-bedroom dwelling completely equipped except for refrigeration, without land."

The reason for these low prices is self-evident in the following quotation: "Representative Frank L. Sundstrom of New Jersey said at the OIC hearing that the total human labor required for the production and erection of a Lustron house amounts to only 500 man hours, in comparison with the 1500 to 2500 man-hours of on-site labor alone for a conventional house."

The successors to Mr. Wyatt have given very little encouragement to the cause of industrialized housing, though the recently passed modified TEW bill offers some hopes of improvement in this field. Over the very strong protest of the automobile industry the voluntary steel allocation has made a "drop in the bucket" allocation of 59,000 tons of steel for the next seven months to build about 6000 steel and steel-composite homes. This represents the minimum amount that the steel housing industry estimates it can economically operate its industry on. It would seem the wiser part of public policy to allocate the steel housing industry all it can possibly utilize to meet this most urgent need.

Redress For False Charges

A Communication

THE PURPOSE of this letter is to suggest a method of reconciling full freedom of inquiry for congressional committees with a reasonable opportunity for innocent citizens to protect reputations damaged by testimony before such committees.

The method is for Congress to enact a statute creating a civil penalty for false testimony before a congressional committee. The penalty would be the right of any injured person to collect damages in a Federal Court action against the false witness. The new law should also provide that such damage actions be placed at the top of all court calendars and expedited in every way so as to permit the injured party to restore his reputation as quickly as possible.

At present, it is a Federal criminal offense to testify falsely before a congressional committee, just as it is a Federal criminal offense to violate the antitrust laws. But the initiative does not rest with the victim of the crime, and this fact, together, with the careful slowness of our criminal processes, makes the remedy of little benefit to to the injured person. In the antitrust field, Congress has tried to correct this condition by giving the victim a direct and personal remedy—the right to collect triple damages from the wrongdoer in a civil action.

THE SAME solution seems entirely appropriate to protect the victim of a false testimony before a congressional committee. The House Un-American Activities Committee has admitted in its latest report that innocent people may be greatly wronged by its hearings. When there is a wrong, there ought to be a remedy. The innocent victim cannot ordinarily sue his traducer for slander, because testimony given in good faith before a congressional committee is considered to be privileged by our courts. Only Congress can remove that privilege and provide the remedy for a wrong committed in the very congressional presence.

The immunity of a witness from slander actions is a very necessary thing in the courtroom, but it hardly seems justified in the forum of a congressional hearing.

BY REMOVING immunity from its witnesses, Congress would not impair the usefulness of its committees or their ability to arrive at the truth. Congress would be discourgaing truthful witnesses, and it would retain its present power to compel the truth from timid or recalcitrant witnesses.

Such action might even be welcomed by many potential witnesses who do not relish the prospect of being called liars and perjurers by those who may follow them on the stand, without opportunity for redress. It would give both accuser and accused a forum in which to wage a fair battle under traditionally accepted rules.

In any event, the proposed measure would add enormously to the credibility of the testimony at committee hearings, and to public acceptance of committee findings. It would preserve full freedom of congressional inquiry, and at the same time afford some measure of fair play to the many innocent people who can so easily be wronged in the daily course of representative government—even the best that man has yet devised.

Republican Slights

The fact that only Harold Stassen represented the Republicans on Labor Day seems to this none too well informed voter to be of real importance.

If the Republicans are conceding the vote of organized labor as they seem to be by refusing to honor the one day dedicated to labor, as they, the party of Abraham Lincoln, have already conceded the Negro vote albeit to Henry Wallace, how can they still be so certain of victory?

If the high price and housing issues mean anything, and they do—though many high placed Republicans are unaware of it—men like Taft, McCarthy, Herter and Wherry have been almost daily kissing off huge blocks of votes. Nothing if not thorough, the Republicans have been busy smiting the farm vote hip and thigh through attacks on parity payments, farm cooperatives and the reclamation program. They may hold Nebraska, which went 100 per cent for public power under Roosevelt, but the Republican private power drive will do them no good in California, Washington, Oregon and Tennessee.

While the white collar vote may be only slightly larger than that of the repentent Reds, the Un-American Activities Committee has gained no friends for the GOP by its blanket criticism of all Government employes, college graduates or readers of anything but the Hearst-Patterson-McCormick Axis press.

Yes, as a Democrat, I can see that something can be hoped for as a result of the "silent" Republican campaign, but what I see is a strong and growing hope for a Democratic victory. C. L. S.

Congress Hit 'Poor', Brannan Asserts

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 6 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said today the Eightieth Congress "had had no inclination to legislate in the interests of either the farmer or of the laboring man."

Members of the Eightieth Congress, Brannan said in a prepared address to a labor meeting, "seem to have adopted the reverse of an old saying and are out to 'soak the poor.'"

A good share of the speech was devoted to a defense of the price support program—although the Secretary contended that the Congress had not followed his suggestion for changes to improve it.

Brannan said that, if Congress had followed his recommendation and made the price support system less rigid, much of the loss on the price-supported potatoes could have been eliminated.

The Secretary asserted that agriculture and labor are "so interdependent that neither of us could prosper without the other."

"Industrial labor," Brannan continued, "faces unemployment crises and low salaries when the farmer earns too little to purchase factory-made products.

"Yet there are people who would tell you differently. They are politicians who believe that if they can divide us, neither of us will be strong enough to defeat their selfish interests. If we fight between ourselves, we will be unable to fight against them, our common enemy."

Brannan took another whack at Minnesota's former Governor, Harold E. Stassen, with whom he has been feuding. Stassen charged at Albany last week Brannan was trying to maintain high food prices.

"Perhaps Mr. Stassen is getting ready to lobby for a Taft-Hartley Act for farmers like his close friend, Senator Ball (R., Minn.) did for labor," Brannan said.

The Secretary said the Republicans killed the OPA—and that—not price supports—was the real cause of the current high food costs.

He made four suggestions "to correct this situation which is holding your food prices up while it holds down the farmer's income":

1. Continue to increase production, both of raw materials and of manufactured products.
2. Work together "as friends to defeat our common enemies."
3. "We can pass on the truth to others. You can tell them that agriculture's present of 30 billion dollars farm income creates a purchasing power that represents 12 million industrial jobs . . ."
4. "We can elect friendly Congressmen and continue in office the Administration which has done more to help both farmers and labor than either group has been able to accomplish under any other Administration."

Grocers Say 4-Can Eat For a Dollar

Chicago, Sept. 6 (AP).—It's a neat trick to provide a meal for four persons for a dollar these days—but it can be done, the National Association of Retail Grocers says.

Twenty-five menus, the main dishes for which can be purchased for a dollar or a few cents less, are shown in the association's bulletin for September.

The costs for each menu were based on typical retail food prices in New York during April. The association said the most recent United States Department of Labor index of food costs showed New York prices to be average for the rest of the country.

The article points out that prices may vary slightly because of the changing supply situation in various areas. It said:

"These basic menus can be rearranged into hundreds of combinations to suit any family's taste. In any case, the cost per meal will be about $1. To round out each meal, bread, butter, potatoes, salads and a beverage can be added."

A typical menu is one which begins with consomme madrilene, has chicken a la king for the main course with French style carrots. Grapefruit and orange sections is the suggested dessert, bringing the cost to 94 cents.

Roast beef, hamburger and shrimp are some of the items which can be included in the menus, the article showed.

Russians Again Hit MacArthur's Labor Policies

Tokyo, Sept. 6 (AP).—Returning to their attack on General MacArthur's Japanese labor policies, the Russians predicted today that "a large wave" of protest strikes by Japanese would be "natural."

A statement issued in the name of Lieut. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, Soviet member of the four-power Allied Council, again demanded cancellation of the current ban on strikes by government employes.

It was distributed at one of the Russians' rare press conferences. Derevyanko, who has just returned from a long stay in Moscow, was not present. His press officer said he was making the statement for the general.

Hughes As Secretary

By Sumner Welles

Contributions To State Department

MANY appreciations of Charles Evans Hughes are being published. We will have comprehensive biographies telling of his unparalleled service as counsel to the people of New York, Governor, Associate Justice, Secretary of State, Judge of the World Court, and Chief Justice of the United States.

Yet, as a sidelight, these personal impressions of Mr. Hughes as Secretary of State may have some value.

The very day that he entered the State Department a boundary dispute between Panama and Costa Rica flared into hostilities. The refusal of Panama to respect a prior arbitral award and the consequent need to determine our obligations under our treaty with that republic were issues that challenged the judge as well as the Secretary.

As chief of the Latin-American division I was called in to advise him, and was thus given the chance to see Secretary Hughes handle his first diplomatic problem. He mastered an intricate question with incredible rapidity. His decisions were only reached after full consideration from the standpoints of justice, of our national interest, and of their effect upon inter-American relations. This was to be his invariable practice in constructing the new hemispheric policy upon which he had determined.

AS A prime feature of that policy he wished to liquidate the interventions of the previous Administration in Latin America. He had me appointed commissioner to end our military occupation of the Dominican Republic. Had it not been for his relentless campaign against the powerful influences that demanded that President Harding prolong it, the occupation would have continued, and no just evacuation treaty could have been negotiated.

He gave me once an instance of his phenomenal memory. I was with him one morning while he dictated the half-hour address he was to deliver to a Central American conference. He had no time later to read the manuscript. Yet, as I followed my copy at the conference, I found that Secretary Hughes, speaking without notes, was delivering, without changing a word, the precise text he had dictated seven hours before.

The myth of his aloof frigidity was ludicrously untrue. He could check presumption by an icy glare, and he was capable of righteous anger. But no man ever showed a more generous recognition of the work done for him. No one ever enlivened official business with a keener wit. No chief could better inspire his subordinates to the best that was in them. Those of us who served under him will always regard that experience as beyond price.

NO SECRETARY has established so high a morale in the foreign service. Nor has any Secretary enjoyed such close relations with the foreign representatives in Washington.

Mr. Hughes inaugurated the State Department's daily press conferences. The lucidity and frankness of his press conferences are a Washington tradition. Unlike many of his successors he did not fear criticism and he had no need to conceal ignorance. He would rather volunteer information than withhold it. In this he was guided by his belief that in the Government's conduct of foreign policy the press should be, not an antagonist, but a partner in enlightening the American people. He often told me he was convinced that the success of our democracy depended upon an informed public opinion.

As Secretary of State he is chiefly remembered for the agreements upon the Far East and upon armament limitation reached at the Washington conference of 1921. When naval limitation later broke down, the legend was concocted that Secretary Hughes had let us be cheated into scrapping battleships and had helped Japan secure an impregnable position in the Far East.

Those who condemn his historic initiative fail to mention that the three-five-five ratio with Britain and the United States kept Japan for ten years from building up her navy. They refuse to see that it was not the Washington treaties, but the subsequent shortsighted policies of the major powers, that enabled Japan to flout her treaty obligations with impunity. They forget that, had it not been for the Hughes policies, the British-Japanese alliance would have continued and Britain and the United States would have started a naval race. Anglo-American relations would have been poisoned with disastrous consequences for the democracies when the Axis rose to power.

MR. HUGHES accepted office in an administration that was pledged to exercise this country's "influence and power" in an international association "for the prevention of war." That pledge was ignored. He himself consistently recognized our own need for an international organization. This he made again plain when he supported the United Nations Charter. The tragedy is that as Secretary of State in 1921 he had none of the political power that he required to prevail over the Senate "irreconcilables." Against the greedy forces of isolation that dominated President Harding he could not contend.

Had Mr. Hughes been the Republican candidate in 1920 instead of in 1916, world history would have been far different.

In his sheer intellectual supremacy, in his enlightened recognition of this country's permanent interests, and in his constructive patriotism, Charles Evans Hughes towers above all but a few of the truly great Americans of the past century.

During the perilous years of uncertainty that lie ahead we will often realize the significance of our loss of an integrity and wisdom that were unique among our Nation's assets, and that were for so long ever at her service.

Haifa, Palestine, Sept. 6 (AP).—Eight Arabs were injured seriously and several others were hurt in Shafa Amr in a blood feud over a marriage. The Israeli commander of the town of 5000 imposed a 24-hour curfew tonight.

The feud arose between two Arab Christian families in a disagreement of the wedding terms between a boy of one family and a girl of another. The situation smoulered for six months and came to a head this morning when 60 men on each side started fighting. Israeli troops were called out and the belligerent families were separated.

Civil Rights Praters Held Vote Hunters

Richmond, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—A Southern newspaper executive told an interracial group today that "those who talk the most about civil rights are principally seeking votes and disregarding the essential spark of American liberalism."

And the election of the next President of the United States isn't going to bring with it the millenium in race relations, said Edgar Ray, managing editor of the Tampa Daily Times.

Ray spoke before the annual conference of the National Urban League, which has as its primary purpose the economic and social betterment of the Negro.

Ray, president of the Urban League in the Florida city, told the audience of about 300:

"I want to make one thing clear: Partisan political controversy never has, and never will, develop the qualities of the human mind and heart that will expand racial relations and liberalism.

League Need to Continue

"Long after the Missouri Waltz returns to its rightful place as a piece of music——

"Long after Henry Wallace stops trying to be all things to all men in America and Rusia——

"Long after the bitter bourbon of the Dixiecrats has gone down the sink——

"There will be a crying need, as there is today, for a hard-working ever-expanding Urban League with basic human relations and needs as its guideposts."

Millions of minds are closed minds on the subject of racial relations, Ray said, adding that if the league is to be a truly liberal organization, it needs to open as many of these minds as fast as it can, without malice and violence and threats, but with facts, service, understanding and common sense.

Secretary Sounds Warning

Earlier, the League's Executive Secretary Lester B. Granger, said the organization must fight to maintain its independence against any reactionary or radical influences that may seek to control it.

Granger said that the course followed by the league in the 38 years of its existence had been a rocky one.

"Not so many," he added, "have been aware of the strong fight which the league has had to make for its independent existence against the attacks, open and covert, of special interest groups.

"It has been a fight for the understanding support of the public, waged in the face of deliberate misinterpretation of groups opposed to us . . ."

Urges Union

Another speaker, Charles H. Wesley, president of the College of Education and Industrial Arts, Wilberforce, Ohio, urged the league to unite with all races and minority groups who believe in democracy and the march of the people toward a larger freedom for all.

He added:

"Our social agencies with the schools and colleges and the liberal minded editors of newspapers can transform American thought and action, oppose cynicism, selfish group aggrandisement and direct the mind and heart of American youth, although we may despair of its adults, toward brotherhood, equality of opportunity, the emphasis upon duties as well as rights, and peace at home as well as abroad."

482 Hired Daily by U. S. During July

An average of 482 new workers were added to the Federal payroll each day during July, Senator Byrd (D., Va.) reported yesterday.

This, however, was a drop from the 525-a-day average chalked up for the seven months since December.

Byrd, reporting as chairman of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-Essential Federal Expenditures, said the number of civilian jobholders totaled 2,107,244 on July 31.

This was an increase of 14,931 for the month of July and a gain of 111,856 since December 31.

The Postoffice Department showed the biggest gain for both periods—10,419 for the month and 43,784 for the year to date. In this connection, Byrd wrote Postmaster General Donaldson that he understands several factors are involved, including a bigger volume of mail, vacations and replacements by civil service personnel. But he added:

"In view of the size of the increases and their steady continuation for seven consecutive months, formal explanation and justification is requested. Advice would be appreciated also as to when a reversal of the trend may be expected."

Byrd said the military establishment added 5904 workers during July, the Veterans' Administration 1728 and the Agriculture Department 1646.

Among the agencies which cut their staffs were the Treasury Department, 1991; State Department, 1182; War Assets Administration, 1148, and the Labor Department by 958.

Tiny Feet Beat Time for Peggy

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: Listening to her singing "Manana" on the Capitol stage, you'd never think of Peggy Lee as "Mama," would you? . . . But such is this tow-head darling of the youth parade . . . Four-year-old daughter Nicki prattles away up at the Shoreham while Mother Peggy and Daddy Dave Barbour brighten F st. . . . As you're sure the younger generation would like her to be, Peggy's a Modern Mother, believes in discovering all she can about their baby . . . Besides being traveled (she's covered the States, been in Mexico and Canada), Nicki is also far-sighted and wears slick little glasses to cure up this common complaint before she gets to the age when gals don't like to wear glasses . . . The Barbours discovered this early and that's all that's wrong with Nicki . . . Considering that Peggy's and Dave's slick ways with the tunes have put their records on the top with juke-box juvenalia across the land, it's rather pleasant to find they're just as wholesome and thoughtful of their offspring as that nice young couple across the street.

A. JULIAN BRYLAWSKI, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of this area, is understandably unhappy because, in referring to the short subject, "Children in Trouble," our Orval Hopkins, pointing jestingly to the prominence of the New York State seal and "Thomas E. Dewey, Governor," suggested—purely in a humorous vein—that is may have been "hatched up" by the Republican Party . . . The short is on view at all the downtown theaters and we must confess the same suspicion crossed our mind . . . But no, insists Mr. Brylawski, the Republican Party had nothing to do with the prominence of the short . . . It is being run in observance of "Youth Month," part of the Justice Department campaign to combat juvenile delinquency which is earnestly sponsored by President Truman . . . "Children in Trouble" was enthusiastically received by the MPTO reviewing committee, which unanimously agreed it should be shown everywhere . . . Eventually all the neighborhood houses will be seeing it.

EAGLE-EYE HOPKINS, by the way, comes up with the typo-of-the-month . . . For years Edward Everett Horton has been playing "Springtime for Henry" and nothing else . . . Hopkins discovers the New York Times listing last Sunday for Rehoboth's Henlopen Players reads: "Edward Everett Horton in 'The Voice of the Turtle.'"

ALEXANDRIA'S LITTLE THEATER folk claim that the Olney hasn't got a corner on powdered wigs and hoopskirts . . . The Virginians are rehearsing for their third annual colonial revival at Gadsby's Tavern, when the George Coleman-David Garrick comedy of 1776, "The Clandestine Marriage," will open a 12-night run . . . Beginning Monday night, the 20th, the players will take over Gadsby's from the hitching post to the ballroom . . . It's now become an annual custom to be met by "link boys" at the door, to be smiled upon by a colonial hostess, to register with the innkeeper and to rise from your seat when George and Martha Washington, up from Mount Vernon for the performance, arrive in republican state.

GEORGE CROUCH, who has succeeded the late John J. Payette as manager for Warner Theaters in this zone, has announced several changes in duties for his staff . . . Director of Advertising and Publicity Frank La Falce has had his numerous duties added to by becoming supervisor of the Warner and Metropolitan Theaters, although both Fred MacMillan and John Marcon continue—respectively, as managers of those houses . . . Louis F. Ribnitzki has been named film buyer and George Werner head booker . . . James W. Root will be assistant feature booker, as well as short subject booker . . . Charles Grimes will supervise theaters in the Virginia district and Baltimore's Stanley Theater . . . Harry E. Lohmeyer remains district manager of the Washington neighborhood houses, while Nat Glasser continues as manager of theaters in the Maryland district.

TRAPPED BY A TRAIN:—Peggy Cummins and Rex Harrison have Scotland Yard and the county police at their necks, but a slow freight is at their headlights. The adventure befalls them in "Escape," from the John Galsworthy story, which opens Wednesday at the Playhouse white and Negro teachers' salaries. Unlike the school facilities' cases, however, equalization of teachers' salaries has been previously tested in the courts and ordered into effect in several other counties.

Schools Rush Equalization

The Negro leader directing the prosecution of the equalization cases, Martin A. Martin, Richmond attorney, has stated that if the Negro schools in King George and Gloucester Counties do not have equal facilities with white schools when classes begin, he may try to take Negro students into the white schools.

Martin said in Richmond yesterday:

"I don't know exactly what might develop when the schools open. I'm going to King George County myself on Wednesday and check the situation. Then we'll decide what to do."

Asked what King George County will do if such an effort is made.

Gayle Under Virginia Laws

Gayle said, "You know the Constitution and the laws of Virginia prohibit such mixed schools, even if there may be some difference in the Federal laws. As far as I'm concerned, I'm operating under the Virginia laws."

All parties in the dispute yesterday said they anticipate no violence, although Gayle, when asked, said, "I guess there's right much feeling in the county about this."

King George County school leaders did not see the court order until August 5, which gave us only a month to do anything," Gayle said. "I recommended in 1939, when we got PWA funds for a white school, that we should build a Negro high school also. We've spent all our available money the past 10 years trying to bring the Negro schools up to the white schools, and this is one of the poorer counties in the State.

"The Negro high school has no central heating plant, no auditorium-gymnasium, and has outside toilet facilities. We put running water in the science lab today.

"King George Training School had 77 pupils at the end of last term, while the white high school had 189. Differences in instruction, school equipment and textbooks have now been equalized, including employment of a commercial education teacher, new typewriters and other business machines and a full-time janitor for the Negro high school.

"Everything except a new building has been provided at the Gloucester County Training School, which had 135 pupils last term," said Superintendent Kenney there. "We've refurnished the home economics department with up-to-date equipment, and painted and repaired everything.

"The court order was very indefinite, you know. It just called for 'equalization,' and did not specify where. We already have plans for a new Negro high school, and hope a bond issue will be approved for it. Salaries already are equal."

State Medicine Called Legal Corruption

Chicago, Sept. 6 (AP).—Socialized medicine was described by a Chicago economist today as a "peculiar type of legalized corruption."

It results in "wholesale misuse of funds contributed by the public," said Dr. Melchior Palyi who returned a week ago from an invitational lecture tour of European countries.

Dr. Palyi, a native of Hungary and adviser to the German Reichsbank from 1931 to 1933, addressed the annual National Conference of the Professions sponsored by the National Physicians Committee, spearheading opposition to socialized medicine in the United States.

"Every system of socialized medicine operates with huge deficits," Dr. Palyi said, "ultimately at the cost of the taxpayer. Under every governmental system, medical practice suffers in quality. It results in indifference, deterioration and mechanized diagnosis and treatment."

Edwin D. Canham, Boston, editor of the Christian Science Monitor and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, told the meeting "there are a great many people who have failed to recognize the false turning for civilization." He continued:

"Many have been bemused by the collectivist mesmerism of our time. But an awakening is coming and to a degree is already here. More and more people are at last seeing that not only must we go forward, but we must go by the right path which lies in the repudiation of materialism."

Atomic Energy Use in Disease To Be Topic

Reports on the latest developments in the treatment of disease, including the use of atomic energy, radar and sonar, will feature the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the American Congress of Physical Medicine, which opens today at the Hotel Statler.

The meeting which will continue through Saturday, is expected to draw between 500 and 700 physicians, surgeons, nurses and technicians from all parts of the country. Registration began yesterday.

Beginning at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, when the general scientific sessions open, the congress will hear 57 papers on disease treatment by physical agents such as heat, light, exercise and massage, on adopting atomic and other types of energy for therapeutic purposes, and on such subjects as rehabilitation, poliomyelitis and cerebral palsy.

Today's program will be devoted primarily to instruction seminars for physical therapy technicians and nurses, which will continue Wednesday and Thursday.

The annual business session will be held at 5 p. m. Wednesday, and Dr. O. Leonard Huddleston of the University of Southern California at Los Angeles, will be installed as the new president.

The formal opening of the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the American Congress of Physical Therapy will be at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

Tired, "All-In"—Listless Feeling Brought To Halt

As Vibrant Energy is Released To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Do you get up in the mornings still tired, feel down-and-out all day? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Overwork, undue worry, cold, flu or other illness often wears down the red-blood-cells.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that 888 Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the 888 Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, 888 Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on 888 Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. 888 Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Bosox Beat Nats Twice, Gain Game as Yanks Split

Kramer Caps 14-6 and 2-1 Triumphs on Four-Hitter

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nats spent Labor Day by being belabored twice by the league-leading Red Sox.

Splattering 18 hits to all sections of Griffith Stadium, the Bostonians waylaid the locals 14-6 in the opener, scoring nine runs in the fifth inning en route to their lopside victory.

The Nats kept the count to a more respectable 2-1 figure in the nightcap, a decision which enabled Boston to increase its league lead to one and a half games over the Yankees, who split a twin bill with the Athletics.

Compared to their savage attack in the curtain-raiser, the Bosockers were merely trifling with the Nats in the afterpiece collecting only six hits against Walter Mastreson and Forest Thompson.

Two Errors Costly

These, however, coupled with two Nat errors, proved enough to furnish Jack Kramer with his sixteenth success. Kramer held the Nats to four hits, and trailed, 1-0, at one stage as 21,639 customers sat by momentarily mystified.

Tha Nats, however, took care of that deficit for him in short order in the fifth inning when Birdie Tebbetts led off with a single, the second hit off Masterson.

Jake Early sent him to second by throwing into right field trying to pick him off first. When Sherry Robertson fumbled the errant toss, Tebbetts legged it to third. Billy Hitchcock's fly scored him to tie the game.

Singles by Johnny Pesky, Ted Williams and Billy Goodman, produced the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning and cost Masterson his twelfth reversal.

The Nats had three good scoring chances, but cashed in on only one. Gil Coan scored their only run in the first inning, greeting Kramer with a double. Hitchcock's boot of Jim Clark's easy roller moved him to third and Sherry Robertson's fly to Ted Williams brought Coan home.

Masterson retired after six innings with a sore elbow. Mickey Haefner started the first game, but he, too, was pulled out with an injury, leaving the premises in the fifth inning and taking with him his 13th defeat.

Bosox Get 9 in 5th

Haefner's sore back couldn't have come at a more opportune time. Threatening to break loose at any moment, McCarthy's muscle men timed their explosion with Dick Welteroth's entrance into the game.

Fifteen of the merciless Bostonians went to bat in that 30-minute, nine-run fifth. Welteroth pitched six-run, five-hit ball in his one-third of an inning stint, and when it began to appear that the first game would never end, Earl Harrist came in to quiet the visitors.

Wally Moses and Billy Goodman, each four for five, bell-wethered the assault.

With this kind of support, Mel Parnell simply breezed to his 12th triumph. He yielded 12 hits, seven of them coming after the Sox had staked him to a 12-1 lead.

IN SHORT—Telecaster Bob. Wolff put aside his michophone in the sixth inning of the opener for a trip to Georgetown Hospital where Mrs. Wolff presented him with a 6-pound son. Wolff's visit was delayed 30 minutes as the Red Sox had launched their nine-run inning a moment before Bob learned he had become a father . . . The appearance of Bill McGowan as an umpire was his first in any Washington game since the July 21 rhubarb at Griffith Stadium which led to his 10-day suspension.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

TED WILLIAMS broke off a profound discussion of the heat and humidity and bolted away from his company on the dugout steps with the announcement, "Haefner's starting to warm up, and I wanna take a look at what he's got." As Williams cut across the field, Boston Pitcher Mickey Harris said: "Look at that guy. He's hitting .370 and he wants to watch Haefner warm up. That's the difference. The .220 hitters who ought to be thinking about hits, are probably playing with their yo-yos."

POVICH

Before he took off, though, Williams did like the whole idea of the Red Sox leading the league, even if their margin was a mere half-game at the moment.

"They say there's a strain on the team that's setting the pace," he said. "If there is, that's all right with me. Right now the Yankees and Cleveland are playing their heads off trying to get the strain on themselves, huh? They'd like to be leading the league and take their chances of being under the same pressure we're supposed to be under."

IF THE Red Sox do win the pennant, this could be Joe McCarthy's greatest triumph. With the Yankees, his pennant victories were always suspect. Jimmy Dykes once called him a push-button manager, inferring, of course, that McCarthy had merely to signal for a shut-out pitcher, or a pinch-hitter who could step up and hit a home run with a couple on base, if the Yankees ever became that desperate.

But with the Red Sox, McCarthy's genius is being put to the test. To begin with, he had to deal with Williams, whose temperament hastened the distraught Joe Cronin into retirement as the Red Sox manager. Williams hasn't kicked over the traces yet under the McCarthy regime. He hasn't acted up in any degree. He and McCarthy may not be in loving embrace, but they're getting along well enough.

Where Cronin used to make excuses for Williams, and excuse his antics on the grounds "he's just a big kid," McCarthy has cut the Red Sox slugger down to size without embroiling himself. When he's displeased with Williams, McCarthy merely gives him the cold stare and big Ted hauls in his horns. McCarthy has given him to understand he's just another ball player on the Red Sox.

WILLIAMS isn't one of McCarthy's troubles this year, but there are plenty others. He's trying to win a pennant with a pitching staff that definitely is not to be associated with a pennant, and the Red Sox wouldn't be leading the league if they weren't belting the daylights out of the ball. Joe Dobson and Jack Kramer are the only two pitchers of any dependability, the others are high risks.

The pressure is on McCarthy in these stretch weeks of the race. Even Dobson and Kramer aren't the kind of pitchers to throw into a big game that the club has to win. McCarthy can't operate like Bucky Harris who has such as Vic Raschi and Lou Boudreau who has Lemon and Feller to throw in there whenever the Yanks or Indians have to put a mighty pitching army forward.

And for the last week, McCarthy has had a patchwork club on the field, with Bobby Doerr and Stan Spence out with injuries. He came up with Billy Hitchcock as Doerr's replacement and Hitchcock has been sensational. Ancient Wally Moses, as Spence's substitute, won a game from the A's the other day with a big hit in the tenth inning. The Red Sox are not completely dependent on Williams like the Yankees' fate hangs on DiMaggio.

AS I WAS SAYING, if the year does bring forth a Red Sox pennant, McCarthy qualifies for special laurels. He took a big gamble with his infield and won. There were skeptics when McCarthy announced he would play Vernon Stephens at shortstop and convert Johnny Pesky into a third baseman. Eyebrows were arched when McCarthy said that Bill Goodman, his rookie second baseman-outfielder, would be the club's first baseman.

Pesky not only has played his new position like a third baseman to the manner born, but he said the other day, "If I'm ever traded, I want to be known as a third baseman, not a shortstop." Goodman has not only been playing first base more than adequately, but he is lending a potent .307 batting average to the club's attack.

Unlike the Yankees who rise or fall with DiMaggio or the Indians who go wherever Lou Boudreau takes 'em the Red Sox are not a one-man ball club wrapped up in Williams. He is a tremendous asset but no bellwether. That day when the Red Sox scored 14 runs in one inning against the Athletics, Williams didn't get a hit, refuting the idea that the Red Sox don't win unless Williams is pounding the ball.

A's Whip Lopat, 6-2; Raschi Wins 1st, 6-4

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Teeing off on Ed Lopat for four runs in the first inning, the Philadelphia Athletics went on to defeat the New York Yankees, 6-2, in the second game of their Labor Day doubleheader today.

The Yankees won the opener, 6-4.

The victory in the nightcap enabled the A's to shatter the Yankees' nine-game winning streak and at the same time end their own losing streak at eight.

Vic Raschi pitched the champs to their triumph in the first game before more than 60,000 fans. The triumph was Raschi's eighteenth of the year.

Rookie Hank Bauer, making his major league debut for the Yanks, singled in each of his first three trips to the plate.

Verban Finally Hits Homer in 2424th Time Up

Cincinnati, Sept. 5 (AP).—After playing 682 games and going to bat 2423 times, Second Baseman Emil Verban of the Chicago Cubs hit his first major league home run today.

The drive came in the seventh inning of the first game against the Cincinnati Reds. Verban has been in the majors five seasons.

'Skins Beaten Easily By Cards, 46-20

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Sept 6.—Sammy Baugh couldn't handle the champion Chicago Cardinals all by himself tonight and the Washington Redskins took an awful licking, 46-20, in their exhibition meeting here.

A crowd of 17,782 watched the Cardinals, who have won but a single game from the Washington forces in eight years, score in every way possible to slightly avenge a regular season 45-21 beating by the 'Skins last year.

The Cards had six touchdowns, a field goal, a safety and five extra points.

Baugh was on the throwing end of all three Washington touchdowns, once to Rookie Dan Sandifer and twice to Hugh Taylor. Dick Poillon made good on two of his three extra point attempts.

First Period

On the second offensive play of the game, Charley Trippi picked up a first down for the Cardinals on their own 31, but the next play saw Mallouf fumble and Jim Peebles recover for Washington on the 29. In seven plays Washington had a touchdown. Hugh Taylor getting credit on a 14-yard toss from Sammy Baugh deep into the end zone on fourth down. Dick Poillon kicked the extra point.

Baugh's pass was intercepted by Mal Kutner and the Card wingman romped to Washington's 22. A Mallouf pass to Trippi moved up to the 11. Mallouf hurled to Kutner for 10 more, then sneaked over for the remaining 1 yard. Yablonski converted and it was 7-7.

An exchange of punts marked the end of the quarter, on the last play Dan Sandifer turning left-end from his own 18 to romp 37 yards to the Cardinal 45.

Second Period

On fourth down with 2 yards to go, Baugh lobbed a long pass to Sandifer, who engaged in a thrilling juggling match with the Cardinals' Kutner before the latter took possession in the end zone for a touchback.

Passing Paul Christman finally got into action after another punting exchange, but his first toss was far wide. His second was good for a single yard and another swap of punts followed.

Chicago romped from its own 40 to the Redskins' 12, but lost the ball when Christman's fourth down toss to Kutner was dropped in the end zone. From his own 17 Baugh then made it 13-7 with a long heave to Sandifer, the LSU ace taking the ball on the Card 35 and outrunning Bob Hanlon for the score. It was an 83 yard play. Dick Poillon's kick was blocked.

Back bounced the Cardinals on two lightning-like plays. Yablonski went right thru the middle for 67 yards, finally being brought down by Tommy Mont and Bob Nussbaumer on the Redskin 13. On the next play, Christman whipped a flat pass to Angsman on the right to tie the count. Yablonski made it 14-13 favoring the Cards with a perfect place kick.

After Trippi's brilliant runback of Poillon's kick, the Cards were knocking again on Christman's 20-yard pass to Trippi and his 14-yard shot at Kutner, bringing the ball to the Redskins' 6. When three following passes went wild, Yablonski boosted Chicago's margin to 17-13 with a 20-yard field goal as the first half ended.

Third Period

Washington got in one offensive play before the count went to 24-13

Braves Stretch Lead, Socking Bums Twice

Boston, Sept. 6 (AP).—Boston's Braves today lengthened their National League lead to four games over runnerup Brooklyn by clipping the Dodgers twice, 2-1 in 14 innings and 4-0 in the second game called after seven innings because of darkness.

The second largest home crowd of the season—39,670 paid—saw Lefthander Warren Spahn pitch the distance in the first game in which he gave the Brooks but five hits as he won his twelfth decision. Righthander Johnny Sain won his eighteenth in the abreviated afterpiect.

With two out in the last of the fourteenth, Earl Torgeson doubled off the center field wall, scoring Clint Conatser from first base today with the run which gave the Braves the opener, 2 to 1.

Yanks Sweep Cup Matches From Aussies

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 6 (AP).—The two Coast clouters, Ted Schroder and Frankie Parker, completed the rout of Australia's forlorn Davis Cup netters with two more smashing victories today.

With the big trophy already safely stowed away, Schroeder opened the third day's play by crushing Billy Sidwell, 6—2, 6—1, 6—1, and Parker then racked up this country's fifth straight triumph over Australia by trouncing the veteran, Adrian Quist, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

Another small crowd of under 5000 saw the two American stars completely dominate their opponents, as they had in the opening singles on Saturday. Schroeder, at the top of his brilliant game, needed only 57 minutes to chase Sidwell from the stadium.

Parker, in accounting for his second straight-set victory of the series, was much too steady for the 35-year-old Quist, scoring almost at will against the Aussie captain and losing his service only once, in the closing set.

In suffering their worst defeat in cup history, the Australians salvaged only two sets from the five matches played. Quist somehow took a set from Schroeder on Saturday, and the invaders' doubles team of Sidwell and Colin Long won the other yesterday in bowing to Gardnar Mulloy and Billy Talbert.

Schroeder, who at the outset was regarded as the "question mark" of the American side, wound up by playing a stretch of tennis that in its sustained brilliance seldom, if ever, has been surpassed in Davis Cup competition.

The Los Angeles ace won the last two sets against Quist on Saturday without loss of a game. Thus, in his final five sets in a tough league he dropped only four games while winning 30. Probably it's a record.

St. Louis Beaten Out 2-1 and 4-1

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates, who don't do too well against the tail-enders but are murder against the pennant contenders, climbed back into third place today with a double win over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Buccos took the opener of the holiday twin bill, 2 to 1, and the nightcap, 4 to 1.

The Pirates equaled a National League record by making six double plays in the first game and made two more in the nightcap. The league record for double plays in a double-header is nine.

Ralph Kiner belted out a two-run homer—his thirty-eighth of the season—that gave the Pirates the victory in the opener.

Bob Chesnes held the Redbirds to three hits in eight innings, then wavered to allow four more in the ninth.

Reds Split With Chicago

Cincinnati, Sept. 6 (AP).—Hank Sauer's thirtieth homer of the season with a man on base gave the Cincinnati Reds a 3-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs today in the opener of a twin bill. The Cubs won the second, 6-2.

Sauer's clout tied the Cincinnati team record for homers set in 1938 by Ival Goodman. Johnny Vander Meer pitched four-hit ball for his thirteenth victory.

By splitting, Cubs retained seventh place in the National League, one percentage point ahead of the cellar-dwelling Reds.

Buffalo Bills Drub Chicago Rockets, 42-7

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Striking through the air with George Ratterman and over the ground with Julie Rykovich, the Buffalo Bills swamped the Chicago Rockets today, 42 to 7, in an All-American Conference football game before a crowd of 25,816.

On the attack, the Bills showed a marked superiority in line play as they stormed to six touchdowns, two in each of the first three periods.

On the defense, they bottled up Chicago ace Angelo Bertelli and held the Rockets to one touchdown in the fourth quarter when their cause was hopelessly lost.

Buffalo lost no time gaining an early lead. With Ratterman at the controls, the Bills swept to their initial touchdown five minutes after the game started after recovering a Chicago fumble at midfield. Little Chet Mutryn, All-Conference halfback, sneaked across from one-yard line.

Nine minutes later Buffalo scored again when the husky Rykovich plunged over from the eight after Ratterman passed the ball into position.

Rykovich knifed over tackle for a score in the second period, and defensive halfback Chuck Schuette, formerly of Marquette, scooted home with an errant Chicago forward pass for Buffalo's fourth touchdown.

Chicago	0	0	0	7	— 7

Touchdowns—Mutryn, Rykovich (3), Schuette, Tomaszeti, Procter. Points after touchdowns—Armstrong, 6; Juzwik.

Penn 8-Oared Crew First by 2 Lengths

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Penn Athletic Club's senior eight-oared shell prevailed over a surprisingly scrappy Malta crew by two lengths to take the final and featured event of the President's Cup Regatta yesterday on the potomac.

It was the first time in Regatta history that a full day was devoted to oarsmen and a goodly crowd lined the river bank from Memorial Bridge to 14th Street Bridge to watch the record field compete.

Old Dominion, beaten Sunday by Penn A. C. in the Middle States Regatta, was a distant third in the eight-oared race. Malta, moving up from the intermediate class, extended the Penn A. C. crew to the limit before succumbing.

Jack Sulger, 35-year-old New York City cop, suffered his third defeat here in two days when lanky Harold Finigan, 39-year-old Philadelphian representing Malta, again triumphed in the mile singles.

Fairmount's John and Larry Kieffer were upset in the senior doubles by Bill Holby, 26-year-old Princeton music teacher, and Allen Borghard, 19-year-old Rutgers soph.

John, 27-year-old half of the Kieffer brother act, was the outstanding oarsman in the Middle States, winning three events. He and Larry, 25, gained a measure of revenge in the quad sculls, with the help of Jim Muldowney and Al Sonzongni, when they beat Malta and Old Dominion to the finish line.

The victory in the big race enabled Penn A. C. to win team honors with 70 points. Trailing were Ne wYork A. C., 66; Malta, 44; Potomac, 40, and Baltimore's Arundel, 40.

Earlier, Coach Earl Royer's unheralded four-oared six crew from the winning crew were Lou Gills.

The double winners were Larry Wedekind, 16; Vernon Weinkam, 17; Ray Resch, 19, and Walt Dzwianowski, 18-year-old stroke. Egging them on was little Mickey Flynn, 105-pounder who at 13 was the youngest coxswain in the Regatta.

Old Dominion, impressive winner of the Middle States Regatta with 116 points, entered only a few events but managed to win one of the most thrilling races of the day.

In the intermediate quad sculls, it nosed out Richmond's Virginia Boat Club by 2 feet. Members of the winning crewe were Lou Gills, Frank Krafft, Tom Patton and Stroke John Edmonds, jr.

Cards Rout 'Skins, 46-20

2 minutes after the start of the second half. Poillon fumbled and Kutner recovered on the Redskin 20. Charley Trippi accounted for 14 yards, and a Mallouf-to-Elmer Angsman aerial turned the trick. Again Yablonski converted.

When Taylor interferred with Cochran's attempt at a fair catch of a punt, the Redskins lost 15 yards and Mallouf started pitching again from his 45. One pass to Dewell was good for 15 yards and a second to Boris Diamancheff running 20 yards from the nearest defender, was good for 40 yards and another score. It was still 30-13 when Yablonski failed to convert.

Baugh himself added to the Cardinal margin shortly thereafter when he was caught in the end zone by End Sam Goldman for a safety. Poillon kicked off from the 20 after that and suddenly the Cards had another touchdown.

Davis took the ball on the Card 31, headed to the left, reversed his field and thundered between the posts after a 69-yard jaunt. Yablonski made it 39-13 with his fourth extra point as the period ended.

Fourth Period

Washington finally started a goalward march after 3 minutes of the final quarter. Baugh completed three passes in a row to the Card 39, Farmer picked up 19, and two more completions by Baugh ate up the last 17 yards. Taylor took the payoff pass from 10 yards out and Poillon cut Chicago's margin to 39-20 with another placement.

It was a short-lived rally. The Cards matched that score a minute later on just two plays. A pass moved the ball to Washington's 40, and from there Dimancheff did it alone.

He sliced through right tackle and outran two Skins to the goal. Yablonski's fifth placement came at that point and the game ended with Baugh completing short but futile aerials to the Cardinal 45. Final score: Cardinals, 46; Redskins, 20.

Patterned for the Particular and distinguished by DYNAFLOW DRIVE

IF you're the kind of person who likes to look behind the labels when you buy, then you're the very person for whom this brawny ROADMASTER was conceived.

We made it big not just for show, but for the very practical benefits in riding qualities to be obtained from bigness.

We gave it our huskiest power plant not simply to get impressive horsepower ratings, but to provide the brilliant action we think a fine car should have.

We mounted each wheel on its own soft, coil spring not merely out of tradition, but because such springing lays the basis for more uniform comfort for back-seat passenger and driver alike.

We made handling light with a woman's touch in mind, provided deep, soft cushions and smart interior finish in the interests of gracious hospitality.

And finally we reserved for this, the largest and finest of all Buicks, the newest and silkiest form of power transmission.

Only Buick ROADMASTER of all cars on the road has Dynaflow Drive—only this strapping carriage, patterned for the particular in all details, has the drive in which flowing oil replaces both the usual clutch and the familiar low-second-high gear sequence.

From such things has come a swing to ROADMASTER which makes prompt action advisable in placing a firm order. Your Buick dealer will accept yours either with or without a car to trade.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutz starts on Page One today.

Students must present vaccination certificates to complete their registrations. Registration will be completed Thursday.

D. C. Jail Total Sets Record In Fiscal '48

The average daily population of the District Jail reached a record high in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1948, it was revealed in a report made public today by the Department of Corrections.

A total of 18,543 prisoners were admitted during the year, with an average daily population listed as 730, or 60 above the daily average for fiscal 1947.

A similar rise was noted at the Lorton Reformatory, where, the report said, during the last five months "the population has shown a steady increase, which may be indicative of a significant trend.

Average daily population at the Occoquan Workhouse also increased from 562 in fiscal 1947 to 595 in 1948.

The breaking up of homes during and since the war years with consequent increases in youthful delinquency was blamed in part for the increase by Donald Clemmer, chief of the Department of Corrections.

"There have also been increased arrests for alcoholism and other offenses," Clemmer pointed out in explaining the rise.

While citing the "best escape-prevention record" achieved in fiscal 1948, when only five such incidents—all from Occoquan which has no walls or bars—were reported, the summary admitted disappointment in attempts to reform prisoners on a large scale.

The report went on to say that "no American prison, however, can make strong claims in this regard."

Clemmer said that the very atmosphere of penal institutions weakens efforts at reformation.

He instanced the difficulty of re-educating and rehabilitating prisoners while necessarily punishing them through confinement for their misdeeds.

RISE AND SHINE—Well, anyhow, Joan Beane, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tarleton L. Beane, is practicing up as she does a preview for a Washington Post photographer of how it feels to start school. She'll start today in the first grade at the Oak Street School in Falls Church

THIS IS MORE LIKE IT—Joan takes a brighter look at life as she gets all fixed up in frilly dress and hair ribbons. The tablets she is hugging may not be needed on the first day of school, but Joan wanted to be sure she'd have them anyhow

THAT AWFUL FEELING—Joan prepares to step out on her own for the first time and be a "big girl." Mother watches from the doorstep of the Beane home at 119 E. Westmoreland dr., Falls Church. She'll never be quite the same girl again

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

MAYBE IT'LL BE FUN—Now that she's taken the big step, and left home "on her own" for school, Joan looks as though she may really enjoy learning readin', writin', and 'rithmetic

D. C. Weighs Higher Fees On Lodging

Proposal Studied By Commissioners Affects Rooming Houses and Hotels

Tighter controls and higher license fees for public housing accommodations will be considered at a hearing at 10 a. m. today in the Board Room of the District Building.

The hearing, ordered two months ago by the District Commissioners, is on regulations proposed by a special public housing committee affecting all hotels, apartment, lodging, rooming and boarding houses, convalescent and nursing homes, and other public housing in Washington.

The housing committee which studied existing regulations found that services on public housing licenses cost $497,688 during the past fiscal year, while the fees netted only $187,441. The new scale would provide enough additional revenue to meet expenses.

Among changes proposed in the new regulation are establishment of a "tenement house" classification to cover accommodations which cannot be considered apartments or rooms; designate one-room apartments in the "apartment house" classification; limit "hotel" designations to prevent so-called "flop houses" from billing themselves as hotels; and classify convalescent or nursing homes so they will no longer be designated "rooming houses".

Fee increases—not to exceed $500 a year for a single establishment—would go up:

From $15 for apartment houses to $5 each for five apartments or less; $25 a year for the first five and $3 for each additional for houses with more than five apartments.

From no license requirement for tenement houses to $5 each for five tenements or less, $25 for the first five and $3 each for more than five tenements.

From a fee of $15 for rooming houses to $15 for not more than five, $1 for each additional.

From $15 to $25 for boarding houses.

From $18 for hotels to $50 for hotels with 10 rooms or less; more than 10 rooms and one kitchen, $50 for first 10 rooms and one kitchen, $25 for each additional kitchen and $2 for each additional room.

From $15 for convalescent or nursing homes to $40 for each home with facilities for five convalescents or less; $1 for each additional over five.

Hearing Set For Alleged Wife Slayer

A 47-year-old laborer is scheduled to be arraigned today in Arlington County Court, charged with clubbing his bride to death Sunday in an Arlington trailer park.

Police discovered the badly beaten body of Mrs. Julia Hall Baines, also 47, in her trailer home in the 2400 block of S. Glebe rd., early Sunday evening. Her husband, Willie, was arrested in a Fairfax County roadhouse just before midnight and charged with her murder.

Police said the couple had been married only nine days.

Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington County coroner, said death had been caused by a fractured skull, but that Mrs. Baines had also suffered rib fractures on both sides and blows on the face. Police said they believed the weapon used was an electric iron found blood-stained at the scene.

Though it was estimated Mrs. Baines' death occurred early Sunday morning, police had no knowledge of it until a neighbor called about 7 p. m. to say something was wrong. Police said they found the trailer locked from the outside.

Baines reportedly told police that he and his wife had been drinking and fighting Saturday evening.

Man Faces Murder Charge In 5-Cent Row

A 35-year-old shopkeeper was charged in Alexandria yesterday with the murder of a man who, he claimed, had failed to pay for a 5-cent bag of "pork skins."

Held without bond for hearing today in Alexandria Police Court was Theodore McCray, who police said admitted shooting General A. Johnson in a store at 837 N. Columbus st., Alexandria, Saturday night. McCray said he was tending the store in the absence of owner Herbert Jones.

Johnson, a 24-year-old laborer, died in Alexandria Hospital late Sunday night as the result of three bullet wounds. The hospital said he had been shot in the stomach, lower left side and right leg. Police said they learned Johnson left a wife and five children, but had not been able to locate them.

According to the story McCray told police, Johnson came into the store Saturday about 9 p. m., picked up a little bag of fried pork bits off a counter and ate it. McCray said Johnson started to go out without paying. They argued. And then, McCray said, he picked up the gun and emptied it at Johnson. Police found Johnson lying out in front of the store.

Johnson had lived alone in a rented room above the store, police said.

Stiff Sentence Given Young Housebreaker

A 19-year-old youth was given a heavy sentence—14 months—for unlawful entry and petit larceny yesterday and advised to use the time to think about mending his ways.

Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennell imposed the sentence on Horace Dugger Burns, of 509 2d st. ne., with this warning:

"I realize that the sentence I have imposed is a heavy one, but you must learn that you cannot violate the laws of society without punishment. If you do, society will put you away where you cannot interfere. Use this time to think of that, and when you come out, get yourself a job and live decently."

Burns' record showed one prior arrest, a charge of petit larceny, for which he was placed on probation a short time ago.

He was sentenced yesterday to 6 months for unlawful entry and 30 days for petit larceny for breaking into the room of William L. White, sr., 202 E st. nw., September 1 and stealing a dollar bill from White's wallet.

Another sentence of 6 months for unlawful entry and 30 days for petit larceny was imposed on him for breaking into the Hecht Co. warehouse, 618 6th st nw., August 18, and stealing a radio and typewriter.

White's son, William L. White, jr., of the E st. address, charged with unlawful entry and petit larceny after breaking into the Hecht Co. with Burns, was placed on probation by Judge Fennell.

Policeman Hurt Going To Accident

Park Police Pvt. James Lyons, 36, was thrown from his motorcycle as he sped to answer an accident call yesterday, winding up in the hospital a few minutes before the victim of the prior accident.

Meanwhile, the District last night remained free of traffic fatalities during the three-day holiday period. Throughout the country, 233 were reported killed in traffic, 39 were drowned and 44 died in miscellaneous accidents since Friday for a total of 316. Last year the total Labor Day holiday toll was 451.

Over Saturday and Sunday one Washingtonian was drowned and five others died in traffic accidents outside the District.

The policeman, who lives at 908 Girard st. ne., suffered a possible fractured ankle and bruises. His cycle skidded, hurling him to the roadway as he approached 17th and D sts. nw., in answer to a call that another cyclist had been injured in East Potomac Park.

The latter, Frank Schmunk, 43, of 5922 13th st. nw., suffered bruises when the parked motorcycle on which he was sitting was bumped by a motorist.

Lyons was admitted to Emergency. Schmunk was treated and released.

The car of a retired fire battalion chief about 8 o'clock last night was battered when struck by an Engine Co. No. 3 hose wagon as the latter was speeding to a minor fire. No one was injured.

The former fireman, W. H. Nash, 66, of 4324 Chesapeake st. nw., had halted his car on N st. near Connecticut ave. nw., when the heavy hose wagon, turning into the street, sideswiped the auto smashing the grill and the left fender. Only damage to the hose wagon was a smashed siren.

The fire was confined in a pile of greasy rags near 1217 25th st. nw.

Man, 71, Killed, 2 Hurt When Auto Hits Pole

A 71-year-old Drayton, Md., man was killed last night when the car in which he was a passenger crashed into a pole on Route 244 near Valley Lee.

The victim, James W. Travers, was pronounced dead from head injuries on arrival at St. Mary's Hospital in Leonardtown by County Medical Examiner J. S. Lane.

Second Spider-Snake Bout Discovered in Arlington

Another life-and-death struggle between snake and spider broke out yesterday in an Arlington basement. It was Arlington County's second and the Nation's fifth snake-spider brawl.

Unaware of the new jungle-like bout, the Arlington County Animal Welfare League yesterday prepared to climb into the web of an earlier Arlington snake-versus-spider match which now is in its sixth day.

Mrs. Paul M. Twyne, league president, said she had been besieged with calls from Greater Washington residents to "do something." Yesterday she wired national league headquarters "to find out what our legal rights are."

"It's just like a bull fight," she said.

The league president sent the telegram, she reported, after conferring with Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker about the battle. He was "not sure" what the league's legal rights are, Mrs. Twyne said, because "it's the first time in Arlington County that such a problem has come up.

The second such problem arose sometime before 10 a. m. yesterday, when a 6-inch-long, pencil-thin reptile stuck its questing head into a web operated by a spider in the basement of Harmon J. Swink home at 4866 Old Dominion dr.

Mrs. Swink, who furnished a calm, blow-by-blow account, said she first saw the fight when she entered the basement yesterday morning to wash clothes.

The snake apparently ran into the web after crawling through an open window next to it, she said. "He ties himself up in knots and goes through all kinds of things." Mrs. Swink reported. Through it all, the penny-sized spider is 'watching him.'"

Mrs. Twyne, unaware of the new battle but concerned no little about the original one in Army Sergt. Robert H. Anderson's basement at 2400 S. 4th st., wants national league headquarters to tell her if "our humane code protects a coldblooded animal."

With the N. 4th st. struggle going into its sixth day today and the snake reported tiring, Mrs. Twyne expressed the opinion that "the snake didn't get in the web by itself."

"If they were fighting in the open, we'd let it go," she declared. "That's the survival of the fittest, and nature takes its course."

Said Sergeant Anderson, who refused to permit a league representative to free the snake: "It might prove scientifically interesting."

The snake in Mrs. Swink's basement was identified by Dr. Doris M. Cochran, associate curator of the National Museum's division of reptiles, as a "newly-hatched ring neck snake—Diadophis punctatus."

Man Is Held In $10,000 Bond as Sex Psychopath

Defendant Is 63, Charged With Efforts to Molest Several Young Girls

A 63-year-old man, charged with being a sexual psycopath, was held under $10,000 bond in Municipal Court yesterday.

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell continued the case to September 14 to give Assistant United States Attorney Robert Short time to file a statement with the clerk of the court covering the charge.

Short said later that before passage of the Miller Act last June, there was no statute under which the defendant could have been arrested.

Several Mothers Complain

The defendant, Joseph Sumpter Watts, of 1425 Q st. nw., was arrested on the complaints of several mothers that he had tried to entice their little girls into his home for abnormal sex acts by offering them money last week. The children refused and were not touched.

When arrested Saturday, Watts told police he had been drinking and knew nothing about molesting the girls. After he was confronted by the girls, two of whom are aged 6 and 9 years, he confessed that he had probably tried to molest them, police said.

During the questioning the three girls were asked to give their opinions on what happens to children who do not tell the truth. Said one: "We will be punished." Said another: "God will not bless us." The third replied: "We'll be sent to reform school."

Record of Sex Offenses

Watts admitted that he had had abnormal sex impulses since he was a teen-age boy, police said. His record shows numerous convictions for such offenses, including a 5-year sentence for attempted rape and a 5-year sentence for assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge. If convicted on the present charge, he will be committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Two other men were ordered held under $1000 bond each for grand jury action for committing an indecent act. Arrested near the Smithsonian Institute Sunday, they were Edward Patrick Flaherty, 18, a sailor stationed with U. S. N. Communications, Chelingham, Md., and Bennie Bontone, 30, of 1227 V st. nw.

Gannon Favors School Film On Babies

Dr. James A. Gannon, Board of Education member, said yesterday he would favor the showing in District schools of a film—used in other cities—depicting formation of a baby in the mother's womb.

But the well known surgeon, a member of the school board for eight years, voiced vigorous disapproval of sex education classes in public schools.

Prenatal development, he said, "is not sex, but the result of it.

So delicate a subject as sex "should be treated individually," said Gannon, "and in the privacy of the home, the physician's office or the office of the school counselor." He made his remarks on a half-hour question and answer radio program, "The Modern Woman," over Station WMAL.

He urged that children be told the facts of life as early as they evidence a curiosity about them.

He asserted, however, that lack of sex instruction would have no effect on juvenile delinquency. In fact, he said, the cause of juvenile delinquency is associated with many other things, and a potential delinquent would "simply misuse sexual knowledge."

Furthermore, Gannon stated, a public school class on sex would be almost impossible to operate, because of the difficulty in finding the right teacher. Unless the teacher was exactly suited to the task, Gannon said, "he would evoke only mirth or disgust from the students."

Sex instruction in the District schools today, Gannon explained, is limited to the facts given in biology courses and high school classes on personal hygiene and boy-girl relationships.

Police Arrest Four As Whisky Peddlers

Four men, described by police as "curbstone whisky peddlers," were arrested early yesterday on charges of keeping and selling whisky without licenses.

Four separate groups of police vice squad members said they purchased four bottles of whisky from the four men at U st. and Portner pl. at four different times between 3:30 and 4:50 o'clock yesterday morning.

After each man accepted a marked $5 bill for the whisky, he was placed under arrest, police said.

The four, released under $500 bond each for appearance today in Municipal Court, were identified by police as Herbert Phinsee, 47, of 2017 Portner pl. nw., arrested at 3:30 a. m.; Clarence Butler, jr., 35, of 1322 7th st. nw., arrested at 3:45 a. m.; Robert Jones, 35, of 1504 Q st. ne., arrested at 4:30 a. m., and George Robert Hudson, 22, of 2026 Portner pl. nw., arrested at 4:50 a. m.

New A. D. A. Makes Bow

Robert M. Scott prosecuted and won his first case as an Assistant United States attorney in Municipal Court yesterday.

The case was one of simple assault in which Willie Junior Wilson, 25, of 423 1st st. nw., was charged with striking George Washington of 422 2d st. nw., with his fists.

Under questioning by Scott, Washington testified he was asleep on a bench in the 400 block of 1st st. nw., when Wilson, whom he had never seen before, struck him and knocked him to the ground.

Washington said he had to be treated at a hospital for severe lacerations of his head and left eye. Judge Aubrey B. Fennell sentenced Wilson to a $100 fine or 60 days in jail.

Auto Suspect Held

Pvt. Robert H. Parris, 23, a Marine from Quantico, Va., charged with theft of an automobile, was ordered held under $500 bond for grand jury action in Municipal Court yesterday.

The car owned by The Washington Post, was stolen from the Washington Garage, 1212 E st. nw., last Friday. Parris was arrested by Alexandria police the same day after a 70-mile-an-hour chase in a car along the Mount Vernon Memorial hwy.

Lissome Lass Lightens H. Q. Line-up Until—

New interest flickered in the eyes of policemen and detectives as the pretty brunette in black satin skirt and blouse mounted the stage at police line-up yesterday.

A good looking woman certainly provided relief from the dreary procession of hard-faced hoodlums which face policemen daily under brilliant lights. The officers showed appreciation by a series of muted whistles and "wolf calls."

The brunette, 5 feet 9 inches in high-heeled ankle-strapped shoes, smiled provocatively as Capt. Robert V. Murray, acting chief of detectives, intoned the charge: " . . . arrested on complaint of two soldiers that she was molesting them, trying to pick them up . . ."

The eyes of the assembled men focussed on the prisoner's carefully made-up face seemed to express a concerted thought "wish I'd a been one of those GIs . . ."

Then, with the effect of a 50,000-volt electric charge Murray continued: "On investigation this woman turned out to be a man!"

No wolf calls cheered the brunette on removal from the stage for release. Washington has no law against appearing in masquerade.

The true sex of the brunette was discovered after arrest during a routine venereal disease examination at the Women's Bureau.

Parties Blend Hulas, Circuses Champagne

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 6.—Back East Hollywood chatter concentrates gloomily on budget parings, salary cuts, contract canceling. But out here, to the innocent observer from hicktown Washington, life is a lovely lovely dream, studded with diamond necklaces, platina fox stoles, platters of filet mignon and other such out-of-the-world extravagances. Take, for instance, the past few days. In these crowded hours an extraordinary variety of parties were telescoped:

An evening during which Tahitian and Hawaiian dancers shivered delicately on a green lawn, while indoors a charming French chanteuse shrugged through naughty boulevard songs.

A dinner dance where everyone cocktailed on a blue floodlit terrace, dined and danced in a sapphire blue tent, sides made of transparent plastic material.

A pre-circus supper served on a terrace fronting a house built into a high hillside, with half the guests dressed as circus characters, with the fixings, including a butler dressed as a clown, a real popcorn vendors' wagon, a dittoly genuine Good Humor truck and pink lemonade, which deceptively proved to be champagne, tinted heaven knows how.

The six Tahitian charmers danced on the lawn of French Consul General Sasha De Manziarly who once spent four obviously unforgettable months in those lovely Pacific islands. The dancers were accompanied by a masculine compatriot on a guitar and half the audience hummed the songs. As a terpischorean finale the daughter of a Hawaiian princess, in a shimmering silver hula skirt danced her native dance. Thus, with no trouble at all, experts in muscular activity could compare the rather more agitated hip movement de rigeur in Tahiti with the more sedate free hip wheeling popular in the Territory of Hawaii. The singer—Denise Darcel, a newcomer hereabouts—had one of those gaily mobile faces always popular in France, a very handsome chassis exposed expertly, a husky voice and was altogether great fun. Among the spectators were Charles Boyer, who is short, rather sallow, wearing a brown tweed sport coat; Jacques Tourneur, who directed "Berlin Express," a very nice Frenchman who speaks pure American, chain smokes specially made, positively yard long, cigars and is very nice to talk to; a variety of interesting musicians, foreign students, exiled Romanians and Yugoslavs—and, of course, the host who plays the guitar and sings with great charm and skill.

Man in Late Forties Tells His Wife to Fancy Herself Single, and to Deny His Whereabouts To Friends, While He Makes Love to Secretary

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For over a year now my husband, in his late forties, has been friendly with a young lady 25 years his junior. She is his very efficient and attractive secretary and indispensable to his work. Incidentally, she has no parental or family ties.

For several months, their meetings after business hours have been occurring more and more often,—three times a week at least. These include, by John's admission, dinner and theater dates, "necessary to business," he says, as well as swimming and golfing excursions into another State.

He never returns home from these "meetings" before 2 a. m., and now expects me to "cover up" for him if one of his business associates tries to locate him.

A Serious Affair, Wife Is Convinced

I HAVE evidence, unsolicited, that this is a serious intimate relationship and I have no desire to "hold my man" against his will. Our family life, per se, has ceased to exist. John has lost all interest in the children and the home and suggests that I pretend to myself to be a bachelor woman!

He argues that as long as my household bills are being paid, I should be satisfied without the companionship we once shared; and beyond that, he refuses to discuss the change in our relationship.

Should I continue to keep the "home" together for three small children, at the expense of my pride and love and self-respect? Or should I force the issue and settle the future one way or another? I believe the situation must be equally trying for the young lady involved. C. B.

Strange Behavior in Married Pair

DEAR C. B.: John's home front attitude about the affair is extraordinarily callous and raffish, and your comment on the situation is strangely composed, quite unlike the distrait or indignant protest that usually issues from a faithful wife thus shabbily treated.

This suggests the possibility that your pre-marital relations with John may have been irregular, too; and the fact that he is in his late forties, whereas your three children are "small," suggests that this may be second marriage for him, which suggests another possibility, to-wit: that you may have won him away from another and older wife some years ago, using tactics similar to those now being used against you.

How else explain your philosophic, even quasi-accommodating reaction to his cynical candor about his misconduct, which seems to say, "you have no kick coming"? Or his insolent request that you "cover up" his trysts from business associates, if any try to locate him?

Man Is Incapable of Bona Fide Love

FOR ADVICE, the security-needs of the children merit first consideration, and unless you have the personal resources or family backing to provide them with good home care, quite apart from domestic partnership with John, you had better sit tight where you are and let the girl "force the issue," as she will eventually, if the liaison persists at "serious" pitch and John seems content with that arrangement, and you show no signs of quitting the marriage.

In such case, John (being a weakling) probably would take the path of least resistance and affirm allegiance to wife and children, rather than drive head-on into the costly uproar of stormy divorce

About Waxing Walls

Most of the walls in our house are paneled in knotty pine. How often should these walls be waxed and what type of wax is recommended for this sort of job? In the hallway, which would otherwise be gloomy, the paneling is painted white. Should, or can, anything be done to prevent undue drying out of these panels? J. J. H.

After a good protective coating of oil or wax has been built up on the walls, they will probably not need further coats oftener than once a year, possibly not even that often. You can determine when a new waxing is necessary by their appearance. To wax them, use a good grade of colorless paste wax if you do not wish to darken them. Or, you could use one of the furniture waxes which comes in various wood colors and is sold in auto accessory stores.

Keeping the painted wood covered at all times with several coats of good paint should be all that is necessary to keep it from drying. If you notice that the paneling is drying out and shrinking excessively it is probably because the wood was not properly seasoned.

My deep-well cooker (electric range) has become discolored by sterilizing the baby's utensils. I have tried baking soda, which has only blackened it more. How can I restore the aluminum? W. N. D.

Boil a solution of two teaspoons cream of tartar to each quart of water in the cooker. Or, cooking acid food such as tomatoes, apple sauce, etc., in the cooker will brighten it with no injury to the food. If the deposit has been on the cooker for some time, it may be necessary to cook acid-type foods in it several times before the deposit is entirely removed.

Should the floors be shellacked? What care should they be given in regard to routine scrubbing and waxing? How often? P. C. A.

To retain its natural color, a floor can be finished with varnish, shellac, wax or a combination of these. Or, you could use one of the products on the market sold as floor "seals." If you do use shellac, be sure that it is not more than six months old or it may fail to harden properly. If the floor is to have lots of wear, the shellac should be protected with several coats of paste wax. Apply each coat thinly and when it is thoroughly dry, buff it well before making the next application. If it is possible for you to rent an electric buffer for the session you will be able to get a harder finish. If possible, the waxing should be done before you move into the house. A new floor will require more frequent waxings than will a floor upon which has been built a protective layer of wax. So, to keep these floors lovely, I would suggest you renew the wax, especially at the much used spots as soon as it shows signs of wear or soil. Before applying the new wax remove old wax and soil by wiping with liquid wax, scrubbing until the floor is clean. Then immediately give the area several applications of wax as described above. If you renew the wax in this way before it has completely worn down to the shellac, it should not be necessary to use water or stronger solutions on the floor to get it clean.

action to oblige his paramour; because of course he would realize that you held most of the cards necessary to obtain substantial property settlement and custody of the children.

John isn't in love with the girl, but rather resisting his family's claims to love. He is an infantile neurotic male, incapable of significant interpersonal unity. The escapade is still in the "high adventure" phase for him; the young lady is having her innings now, such as they are; but if, as and when she starts taxing him for proof of responsible devotion, he will reject her defensively and retreat to home base, provided you've left the door open to him.

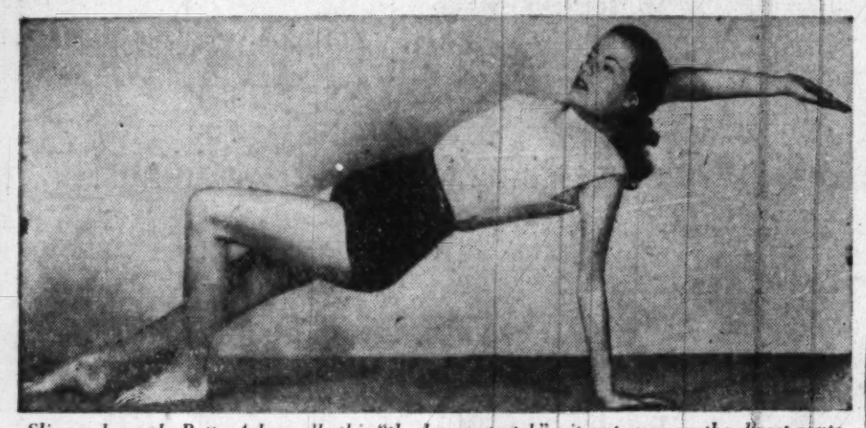
Exercises Make You Look Slimmer



Slim and supple Bette Arlen calls this "the home stretch"—it puts you on the direct route to streamlines . . . you can't miss! Bette is appearing in RKO's picture "If You Knew Susie"

By Ida Jean Kain

Awhile back I was startled to hear a striking redhead obviously talking to herself. She came upon a full-length mirror and said sarcastically, "Well, you certainly took your own sweet time about getting here!" Then as an identical redhead walked up from the opposite direction, it dawned on me that the first girl had thought she was greeting her twin sister. They had a good laugh, and included me in the fun as I was an onlooker.

Identical twins always have fascinated me. These two were as alike as copper pennies, and I asked if they could fool their friends, and switch dates, etc. Then they told me that life was a merry mixup until one sister went off to school to study music and while there gained weight—15 pounds! Of course, that spoiled all the fun . . . and neither twin liked it. I'm happy to tell you "Fattie" slimmed down. You see, it's food habits.

Or it can be exercise habits. Twins who looked so much alike they could fool their parents went into different careers. One girl majored in English, the other in physical education. Well, our "phys ed" ma'or ate more than her sister, but always looked as if she weighed less—even though they weighed exactly the same. In fact, she looked a good 10 pounds slimmer . . . and their friends no longer had any difficulty telling them apart.

Exercise can help any girl look as though she weighed 10 pounds less than she really does. It's a matter of muscle tone . . . exercise keeps tone or elasticity in the muscles. Toned muscles hug the figure and it appears slim. Toneless muscles bulk out and the figure looks wider—and measures wider.

The English major twin did not need less food—she did need more exercise. And that is the solution to many a figure problem. So let's wind this up with one sure streamliner . . .

This exercise reaches all the big muscles of the body.

Position: Sit on floor, feet together, knees bent, the weight of upper body supported by your hands which are slightly behind you.

Movement: At count of one, raise body from floor, stretching right leg out and right arm beyond head . . . and st-r-r-etch out long and slim. Relax to first position. Then repeat, stretching out left arm and leg. Do this exercise slowly, and repeat four times, alternating sides. Later, eight times. Relax! This doesn't miss a muscle.

Send to "The Washington Post for Ida Jean Kain's Waist Whittling Diet enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Suggestions for the Cook

Slices of fresh pineapple on a bed of watercress and garnished with mayonnaise make a refreshing dessert salad. To make it more elaborate, add cream cheese squares dipped in finely chopped filberts.

Fresh lemon slices added to shoulder lamb chops that are being braised give an unexpected and delicious flavor.

For a tangy sandwich spread add finely chopped watercress to cream cheese; spread on thin slices of bread, roll each and chill in a damp cloth.

Fill fresh pear halves that have been sprinkled with lemon juice with mounds of current jelly and serve around a roast chicken.

For a Sunday night supper platter arrange cooked asparagus on the serving dish, top with creamed tuna and a sprinkling of Parmesan cheese. If the platter is of a heat-resistant material it can be put under the broiler for a few minutes so the cheese will melt and turn golden-brown.

Spread deviled ham on buttered toast and top with scrambled eggs and finely chopped chives or parsley; serve as a luncheon dish with a mixed vegetable salad.

For Safety's Sake

Form the habit of switching the porch light on before answering the door at night. Then the person is revealed to the neighborhood as well as to you and there is a feeling of safety if it proves a stranger.

'Fore' Means 'Look Out Or You'll Get Conked'

We were listening to Bill Stern's broadcast of the finals of the National Amateur Golf Tournament. At the end of the thirty-fourth hole, Stern said:

"Billows is now two down, and two holes remain to be played. Billows is dormy."

Sports Editor Bus Ham is a patient listener, so I griped to him.

"Stern ought to get hep," I growled. "The player who is ahead the number of holes remaining to be played is dormy—not the guy who's losing."

"Yes," agreed Bus, "that's a common mistake. But let's see how good you are on another well-known golf term. What's a 'bogey'?"

That's easy," I replied. "A bogey is one over par for any given hole. I ought to know."

"You ought to, but you don't," corrected Bus. "Go look it up."

You golfers may not believe this, but most dictionaries say that a bogey is "a given number of strokes for each hole, against which players compete." In other words, "a par."

The only dictionary in which I found any reference to "one over par" was in the recently published American College Dictionary (Random House). Perhaps some of you readers will be able to supply us with more up-to-date definitions and explanations thereof.

It's something of a shock to find that I've been misusing the term, but it's comforting to know that another word I checked was correct.

A birdie is still "one under par," and if I ever shoot one I'll know just what to call it.

WELL—DOT'S DOT

Our old friend Nate Leiderman of 6206 Georgia ave. nw., keeps cool on these hot days by contemplating the importance of dots. He says:

Dots are very useful in keeping dollars and cents from getting all mixed up; also for letting people know when a letter is an i.

Dots are important commercially to such people as doctors, columnists and salesmen. Doctors make a living treating people who see dots in front of their eyes. Columnists use dots to separate items . . . like this. And salesmen arrange their dots in neat lines, usually at the bottoms of contracts and order blanks.

Telegraphers would be lost without dots; so would statisticians who compute such interesting information as the fact that the average family has 2.4 children. Without the dot, that would be quite a brood.

And, of course, dots are essential to people who like to keep appointments on the.

Some people stick little tails on dots. Then they become commas, and lose most of their value.

When you come to a dot with a tail, you know the author is just winding up for another long-winded thought; but when you see a dot without a tail, you know he's all finished and you can put down his treatise and go fix yourself a nice cold lemonade.

That's the end of our dot lecture—period.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

This city must be full of others like ourselves, who like to sing but can't. So we have a suggestion to make:

Why shouldn't Washington have a group devoted to community singing?

Each singer in a choral group enjoys the spirit of companionship which adds so much to the delight of music—and the weakness of individual voices is concealed by the strength of the group.

Arrangements for such a project should be comparatively simple and inexpensive. Perhaps the Watergate might be used, with an organist as accompanist, or maybe one of the service bands.

Either a small admission fee or voluntary contributions should not only defray expenses, but show a profit (which might be used for the support of the National Symphony).

How about it? Don't you think community sings would be a real cultural asset to our home town?

Janice M. John.
Mary DeFerrare.
413 Emerson st. nw.

Dear Janice and Mary:

I sure do. And if we'd ever get caught by a shower at the Watergate, bathroom tenors like me would feel right at home.

Seriously, I think you ought to try to interest our Paul Chandler Hume in your project. Meantime, any District Liners who want to work for community sings can drop you a line to indicate their support.

Bill.

GET 'EM IN, BOYS

Memo to Capital Transit: Many of your bus drivers need a reminder that they are supposed to pull INTO bus stops—not merely approach within shouting distance of them.

The worst offenders are the boys who nose the front end in, and leave the hind end of the bus sticking out in the next lane of traffic.

On such narrow streets as Minnesota ave. se. this constitutes a dangerous hazard. There are only two traffic lanes to begin with, and they're constantly filled with whizzing cars.

Add the rear end of one bus, season with a dash of impatience, and you have the recipe for an upside-down cake—made of metal.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Arnold Stang, who has appeared on all of Henry Morgan's programs, will be given the comedy role in Morgan's Broadway revue this fall. . . . Moss Hart and his wife, Kitty Carlisle, returned to their Bucks County farm after a trip to Provincetown and learned that their 7-month old son, Christopher, had been unable to sleep nights. Their doctor prescribed sleeping pills for the infant. "He needs sleeping pills?" said Hart. "He certainly is a son of mine." To make the resemblance complete, Mrs. Hart added that as soon as the youngster is able to talk he'll be psychoanalyzed.

The news that Minna Everleigh, who with her sister, Ada, ran the celebrated Everleigh Club in Chicago, is seriously ill in a New York hospital, revived interest in Charles Washburn's book, "Come Into My Parlor." Washburn's story of the last of the vice lords is in the New York Public Library under "History of Chicago." . . . In discussing the Everleigh era one night, Washburn told of his work as a Chicago reporter and of accompanying Walter Howey, the fabulous editor, in a search for a murderer in the dives of the city. In the worst of these places the tough, resourceful editor suddenly started weeping: "I'm sad tonight." . . . "Because of this rotten place?" asked Washburn. . . . "No," sobbed Howey, "because today is my birthday. I'm an old man of 30."

The CBS raid of a top NBC show came as the result of a hurried flight to the Coast by Bill Paley, head of CBS. Its acquisition involved a two-million-dollar payment . . . Raphael Soyer, the painter, has just completed an illustration for the October issue of Seventeen . . . J. Arthur Rank has rejected all offers for his American film interests. He is determined to maintain his hold here . . . Jimmy Gleason drove his car through Beverly Hills, Westwood, Bel Air, Santa Monica, Brentwood and Englewood, and said: "Hollywood is just six suburbs in search of a city."

The Chambers-Hiss-Peters hearings made references to the Lenin School in Moscow. The school flourished before the war, and its most illustrious graduates are Tito and Togliatti. The courses included "Techniques of Passport Forgery," "Fund-Raising," "The Art of Taking Power," "Mimeograph Through Use of Gelatin," and a "Recruiting" course patterned after Tammany Hall's system . . . The course in "Barricades and Street Fighting" advised the pupils to wear hats, in which long pins could be hidden—for pins are handy in unseating mounted policemen by jabbing deeply into the horses.

David Sarnoff, head of RCA, once had a dinner date with Albert D. Lasker, who then owned The Pepsodent Co. Lasker said: "I'll come, but on condition that at 7 p. m. I can listen to 'Amos 'n Andy'." Mr. Sarnoff asked: "Who's Amos 'n Andy?" . . . Mr. Sarnoff is responsible for radio as we know it today. When RCA's interest in radio was only as a means of communication to rival Western Union and Postal Telegraph, Sarnoff—who loved music and wanted it spread througout the world—conceived the idea of a Music Box. He built the first one in Marconi's laboratory, on a yacht cruising in Europe. And the first music they heard from it was the chimes of Big Ben.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Beck 'Tops' in Teamsters Union

(While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

President Truman's old Senate Investigating Committee will unlimber a noisy expose right in his own lap.

Vaughan

The committee has evidence that Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, hefty White House Military Aide, exerted personal pressure to obtain valuable export licenses.

Also involved in the case are a Crescent Trading Co., Luis Periera Domingos Kailly, and a Col. Hubert Julian, a former Army officer. They will appear as witnesses when Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the committee, holds public hearings "at an opportune moment" during the Presidential campaign.

The sensation is being carefully timed for the most potent political effect.

The committee has been probing export license handling for months. One explosion has already been scored in the William Remington case. Involved in the Russian "spy" charges, he was disclosed to have been until rerently a key official in the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade, which issues export licenses.

Pressure

This is the evidence the committee has concerning Vaughan:

On May 17, 1948, he wrote a letter, on White House stationery, asking the OIT to give the Crescent Trading Co. a license to export flour. This company has been under scrutiny for a long time for buying export licenses from other concerns. This is a prohibited practice.

According to testimony in the hands of the committee, Vaughan, at the time he wrote his letter, had "never met the applicant nor the cosignee." Nevertheless, Vaughan's letter vouched for the Crescent Company's financial responsibility.

Colonel Julian gave Vaughan as the source of this letter.

Domingos Kailly informed the committee that he met Julian through an "acquaintance," and that Julian boasted he had influence in Washington and could obtain the export license Kailly wanted for the Crescent Company. Julian made good his word and Vaughan's letter accompanied the Crescent application to OIT.

Julian also sold the Committee some other things. One was that he and two other men were seeking Vaughan's influence in connection with a "cigarette deal" in Germany. This affair involved 100,000 cases of so-called "overaged" cigarettes.

Note—The committee also plans to air numerous cases of looseness, and possibly worse, in OIT administration. In one instance, a ship was allowed to report its export-licened cargo four days after sailing and when it was impossible to check the actual goods. In a number of other instances banned goods were allowed to be shipped to Russia and its satellite countries.

Among these shipments was a considerable quantity of streptomycin. Also, geophone cable, vital in petroleum geological surveys. This case is particularly odorous as, according to committee evidence, no export license was ever actually issued.

Third Party

West Virginia Democrats are charging an attempted $100,000 deal between the GOP and the Wallaceites.

According to the accusation, lieutenants of Senator Chapman Revercomb offered the money to Wallace managers if they would put a candidate into the close race between Revercomb and former Senator Matt Neely, the Democratic nominee. That would have made a three-cornered fight, with the advantage, presumably, in Revercomb's favor.

However, the Wallaceites refused.

Revercomb's chances against Neely are very doubtful. Democratic registration in West Virginia this year topped that of 1946. Also, some of Revercomb's former backers are giving him the cold shoulder because of his authorship of the Displaced Persons Act, denounced by President Truman as "anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic." Local Dewey leaders are particularly sore at Revercomb on this issue because of his refusal to permit the law to be revised at the special session, as urged by Dewey.

Beck Victory

Dave Beck, tough, aggressive Seattle labor mogul, has emerged as top man in the powerful AFL Teamsters' Union.

He won his resounding victory in a showdown with Dan Tobin, 72-year-old national teamsters' president, at an executive board meeting in Chicago last week. Tobin still retains his $25,000-a-year job, but Beck is the real ruler of the million-member union.

A week previous, Tobin had angrily rapped Beck's ambitious knuckles in the teamsters' official paper. He had served notice that he had the power to fire Beck any time as "executive vice president."

The two men had been warring behind the scenes for months over Beck's union raiding and empire building on the West Coast. The Washington State Federation of Labor and other organizations had publicly assailed these tactics. Also, Beck was making no secret of his enthusiasm for the Dewey-Warren ticket. Tobin is a lifelong Democrat.

In the secret executive board meeting, Beck forced Tobin to back down completely.

As a result, the board gave Beck a clean bill of health on his West Coast operations, and announced the teamsters would take no stand on the Presidential race. It was a shutout triumph for Beck.

He lost no time in demonstrating his supremacy—and his intentions.

Several days later, Lester Hunt, long-time teamster editor and close Tobin adviser, quit. And other key Tobin lieutenants were tipped that the same ax is being sharpened for them. Beck is now in the saddle and it's the beginning of the end for old Dan Tobin.

IS SUMMER SUN

CAUSING BALDNESS?

IT IS an established fact that your hair and scalp can be seriously damaged by too much exposure to direct sun rays.

True, all of us lose old hair occasionally, but this occurs naturally as new hair grows to replace it. If, however, your hair loss does not replace itself, and you know your hair is getting thinner, we suggest an immediate consultation. We will either correct the cause, or not accept you for treatment.

Over 125,000 scalp treatments have taught us how. This personal experience in the field of trichology is available at the offices of the HAIR AND SCALP CLINIC only! Remember, more Washingtonians take our modern scientific treatments than any other. Nothing succeeds like success. Every business is judged by results. During the past 12 months approximately 3,000 treatments have been given to clients who visited us on the basis of recommendations by satisfied clients of this office. We invite you to ask any client about our methods or better still, come in for a FREE PRIVATE INTERVIEW and EXAMINATION.
